Prohibition's Death Knell
What Mothers Get
Gold, Yellow and Cold
Mr. Woodin Likes Music
—By Arthur Brisbane—

PROHIBITION IS DOOMED, apparently, and "the saloon is back already," as far as beer is concerned. Long bars with brass rails are numerous.

The country will have two problems: first, how to control the army of criminals that prohibition and bootlegging have created; second, how to deal with the whiskey problem, which will come back in the open. Education must do the latter. Compulsion has failed.

New York State voted repeal of prohibition, 150 to 0. Now West Virginia votes wet, and Mr. Farley, Postmaster-General, who understands politics, says this makes repeal of prohibition certain during 1933.

Those that still believe in prohibition, in spite of bootlegging, racketeering, kidnaping and general devilry, have hitherto felt sure that 13 states, enough to prevent repeal, would remain solidly dry. But Mr. Elihu Root, in spite of his great age, presiding over New York convention, says:

"Two-thirds of the Senate, two-thirds of the House of Representatives, 14 states having a population of over 45,000,000 inhabitants, have all condemned the Eighteenth Amendment.

"There are those who say, 'Never mind, we will have 13 states to prevent the repeal of that amendment.' They are mistaken."

They probably are.

Dr. L. S. Cottrell, Jr., of the University of Chicago, presents statistics proving that when the bride and groom's parents are dead, the marriage is more successful, because young people are happier when they do not have to bother about the wife's mother. That is probably sound in cases where the husband is satisfied with that kind of a wife.

It should have been mentioned, but was not, that the father and mother might have had an easier life if the girl baby, now the bride, hadn't arrived, keeping the mother up at night with everything from teething to mumps.

One thing is certain, and Dr. Cottrell might mention it in his next marriage statement: The mother gets from her children exactly what she gives to her own mother, no more and no less.

If the young wife schemes to keep her mother out of the way, she will find her daughter doing exactly the same thing later, and she will deserve it.

Little Esthonia went off the gold basis yesterday, and France, last big "gold standard" country, begins to worry about gold. It would be embarrassing to have a lot of gold accumulated with much trouble and suddenly discover that the rest of the world did not particularly care about it.

If you were on a desert island with a pile of gold and passing ships signalled that they were not interested in gold and couldn't take it for passage money, that would be annoying.

It is not probable that the world will lose its love of gold now or for many a year. Habits, including the habit of being controlled by organized finance, are not so easily dropped.

But with this country off the gold basis, wheat has gone above a dollar a bushel, and everything else has gone up like a captive balloon, cut loose.

And news that the dollar dropped again yesterday delights everybody, except perhaps a few that have their fortunes in government bonds and other bonds marked "gold."

They don't realize that the only value in a bond or a dollar is the name of the government on it, and if they don't realize that the name of this government is the world's best, so far as values are concerned, they probably will worry.

Mr. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, not only plays the violin, but actually composes music, and will hear some of it played next Sunday by the Manhattan Symphony Orchestra.

This causes some "civilized Americans" to smile sarcastically. They see queerness in a Secretary of the Treasury interested in music.

If Mr. Woodin went to Africa and killed a "rhino" or a gorilla, or took on the champion middleweight with the gloves, having first arranged for the champion middleweight not to hit him, many Americans would say:

"Ha, that's a great he-man, our Secretary of the Treasury."

Leaving the earth, taking off from Chicago's great "Century of Progress" Exposition, Prof. Jean Piccard will trust his life to a balloon and the wind's caprices, and sail up into the stratosphere.

He will go up ten miles or more, taking his compact physical laboratory, studying stratosphere conditions, cosmic rays,

Big Jail Break Plot at Norfolk Camp Foiled

An attempt to effect a wholesale delivery at the State prison colony at Norfolk by tunneling from the prison yard under the East wall was accidentally uncovered yesterday, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The tunnel was discovered late yesterday afternoon by a guard who crashed through the brush covering of one of the shafts leading to the tunnel, which would have been completed within one or two days.

BELIEVE 30 IN PLOT

His cries brought several other guards to the scene and within a few minutes the guards had completely uncovered the work at which the inmates had toiled laboriously for at least three weeks, according to officials.

Guards were immediately redoubled, the holes filled in and a rigid investigation of the entire affair started by Supt. Howard B. Gill. Several of the inmates are under suspicion in connection with the affair and it is believed some 20 or 30 are involved in the attempted jail delivery.

It was learned that two shafts, about five feet deep, had been dug in the prison yard. One shaft was next to the wall and the other about 15 feet away. The shafts entered directly into the tunnel, which was said to be about four feet deep.

FEW FEET REMAINED

The shafts were located in shrubbery and were covered with brush while the inmates were not digging the tunnel, it was said. A hammer, chisel and a tool similar to a pinch bar were found in the tunnel by guards.

It was said that only a few feet remained to be dug in order to reach the outside of the wall.

The digging is believed to have been done during rest periods when the inmates were allowed the freedom of the yard.

DEATH TAKES ARBUCKLE IN SLEEP

End Comes After Celebration of His Wedding Anniversary

New York, June 29—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, 300-pound film comedian whose good natured smile once won for him one of the greatest fortunes of the screen and who was making a "comeback" after twelve years of exile from the films, died suddenly in his hotel early today.

Death was attributed to a heart attack that followed a celebration of the first anniversary of his third marriage. He was 45 years old.

Arbuckle was at the height of his popularity twelve years ago and had an income that ran into hundreds of thousands annually, when the death of a girl following a party he gave in San Francisco made him the storm center of a controversy that shook the movie industry itself.

It was the Arbuckle case that brought Will Hays into the movies as "czar."

HIS LAST PICTURE

Arbuckle completed a picture only yesterday. He made a few last shots at the Astoria studios. Then, accompanied by his wife, the former Addie McPhail, motion picture actress whom he married a year ago, he motored back to his hotel and later attended an apartment party.

In the war years and just after only one movie comedian exceeded Arbuckle in popularity and that was Charlie Chaplin.

He was a graduate of the Mack

CARNERA HAS 59 POUNDS ON RIVAL

BULLETIN

New York, June 29 (AP)—Jack Sharkey weighed in at 201 pounds. This was four pounds under what he scaled for his Schmeling match.

Carnera scaled 260½ pounds, marking the biggest difference in the weights of heavyweight title contenders since Jack Dempsey spotted Jess Willard more than 60 pounds and beat him at Toledo in 1919.

Sharkey, the champion, was found to be in exceptionally good condition. In contrast to his usual talkativeness, he appeared repressed and had little to say.

It was steaming hot weather this afternoon, with some cloudiness, but the forecaster predicted the fistic show would not be interrupted by showers.

2 UNDER FIRE HOLD JOB AS ELY GETS REPORT

BULLETIN

Senator Joseph F. Finnegan of Boston announced today he had sent a letter to Governor Ely, making recommendations as to what Finnegan thinks should be done by the Governor as a result of the grand jury report on crime and police dereliction. While Senator Finnegan would not discuss the contents of the letter, it was understood at the State House that he had recommended the removal of high police officials not mentioned in the report.

Over the heads of Commissioner Hultman and his Boston police, a new club was held today by the Suffolk County grand jury.

As a result of the commissioner's reported intention to defend Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis against the grand jury's charges, it is understood, the jury may bring more serious accusatons against the police.

This would be done through amending its original report of yesterday to include the results of its own private investigation into Boston crime conditions, made by the grand jury through its investigators.

It is understood that this investigation, none of the results of which have yet been released, revealed flagrant evidence of police dereliction in the downtown area in connection with night clubs, rackets and racketeers, and revealed evidence also of police fraternization with the racketmen.

In the report, which recommended ousting of Deputy Anderson as head of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation and Lieut. Gillis, second in command, and which questioned the veracity of Deputy Supt. Martin H. King, the grand jury included only the alleged derelictions revealed solely by testimony of the police themselves.

The grand jury went into session again today to clear up a few routine matters, designed to hurry trials of accused persons now in jail, but this routine was only a matter of a few hours' work, leaving tomorrow and Saturday free for the jurors to go back into the police matter if they feel it necessary.

HULTMAN TO CAPE

By law the grand jury is entitled to sit until the next grand jury is convened for the last six months of the year, which probably will not be until Monday.

Meanwhile today, Commissioner Hultman by a woman in Duxbury, who said she was his wife, was reported as having "gone down the Cape somewhere." Over the telephone from the Hultman home, the woman said the commissioner would not be back until 5:30 p. m., if, in fact, he were back then.

An hour after this first information had come from Duxbury, another call was put in, and this time information was given that Hultman had left the Duxbury house at 10 a. m.—which was after the first call—but the speaker did not know if he had "gone up to the city" or not.

At Westfield, Gov. Ely said over the telephone that he has not yet seen a copy of the grand jury report and could not comment upon it until he has.

"Hasn't it been sent to you, Governor?" he was asked.

"I haven't seen it yet," he replied.

"Well, haven't you read the papers up there?"

REPORT TO ELY

"Do you care to say anything about this case now at all?"

"No, I won't express an opinion until I've read the report."

"Would you care to say anything about Commissioner Hultman?"

"No, I'll make no comment until I've read the report."

At the Governor's office in the State House, his secretary, DeWitt C. DeWolfe, said no copy of the grand jury had been received from the district attorney. As soon as it did arrive, DeWolfe said, he would send it to Gov. Ely by special messenger.

When Dist. Atty. Foley was asked about the report awaited by the Governor, he declared no official request for one had been made.

And just then, the following letter, signed by Gov. Ely, arrived in the mails:

"In view of the fact that the state is responsible for the organization of the police force of the city of Boston, I should be pleased to receive a copy of the report of the grand jury's recent investigation of police affairs in the city of Boston."

Immediately, Foley despatched a copy of the report to the State House by Atty. Michael J. Coyne of his staff.

CHARGES SPLIT POLICE

The police department was split into two factions today as a result of the grand jury report, and department politics that only simmered until now on the surface came more into the open.

In one group of factions the report renewed a wave of criticism that swept the department last January, when Deputy Supt. James McDevitt was removed to make way for Deputy Anderson as head of the "B. C. I."

It recalled another wave of reputed "politics," in which Supt. Michael H. Crowley was openly snubbed on police matters from the time he declined retirement and was upheld by Mayor Curley.

The bitterness that grew among followers of the warring higherups asserted itself today as the entire department waited to see the course Commissioner Hultman would follow on the grand jury charges.

Commissioner Hultman so far has withheld plans for his action, pleading that the report was "a very serious matter" and in need of a thorough study before action is taken.

He indicated, however, that he was satisfied with the "honesty, integrity, efficiency and ability" of the officers under fire and would probably come to the defense of them and his administration.

"I cannot very well comment on the report of the grand jury to the district attorney until I have an opportunity to thoroughly study the comments and the recommendations of the grand jury in its report," he said.

"However, I can assure the citizens of Boston that I will thoroughly study every comment and recommendation contained in the report, having in mind the fact that the grand jury is composed of citizens of this county who are vitally interested in the functioning of the Boston police department."

TESTIMONY ATTACKED

Followers of the investigation today predicted that Governor Ely might withold any action—or even comment—until he is informed of the plans of Commissioner Hultman. The governor is powered with the appointment of Boston's police commissioner and also has the power of removal, with the advice and consent of his council.

Police circles were especially stirred today over the jury criticism of Deputy King, testimony of whom the grand jury said "we hesitate to believe."

Deputy King, as recently appointed inspector of divisions, was known for many years as the perfect policeman. As such he was sent to South Boston for a cleanup of liquor dens and later went to the Milk st. division for work of the same nature.

Test for Two by Legion Police

A call for a special meeting already has been issued by American Legion Police Post 250 at which a resolution expressing confidence in Dep. Supt. John M. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis will be presented for consideration.

Their Move in Jury Call -:- For Heads in Expose

HE'S WAITING TO GET THE GRAND JURY REPORT
Governor Joseph B. Ely is waiting at his home in Westfield to receive a copy of the Suffolk Grand Jury report which flayed the laxity of Boston police officials in dealing with crime and criminals. During the investigation, Governer Ely said that if the police department house was not in order he would put it in order. Until he receives and makes a careful study of the report, he will say nothing. Meanwhile, anxious public is awaiting his verdict.

HE'S GOT THE REPORT BUT REMAINS SILENT
Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman has a copy of the Suffolk Grand Jury report which recommends the removal of two of his trusted confidants, Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen Gillis, head and chief assistant of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation. At Hultman's home in Duxbury today it was said he had gone on a trip to the Cape. Police circles believe Hultman will stand behind Anderson and Gillis and defend their conduct.

Foley Rushes Jury Smash to Ely

For a time today, officials played a bewildering game of "Button, button, who's got governor's copy of the grand jury report" between Gov. Ely and district attorney's office.

Gov. Ely, in Westfield, said he couldn't comment on the report because he hadn't received it. DeWitt C. DeWolfe, the Governor's secretary, declared he hadn't received it, either, therefore could not send it to Ely.

At the district attorney's office it was revealed it hadn't even been sent because no official request for it had been made. Then came a letter from the Governor asking for a copy—and it was immediately sent to the State House.

ARBUCKLE DIES AFTER PARTY

Sennett comedies where he played with Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Chester Conklin and many others who were famous then but are now virtually forgotten. Arbuckle had only to turn his slow smile to get a laugh. He became a star immediately.

CAME FROM TEXAS

In 1917 he and Joseph Schenck, now president of United Artists, formed a partnership for the production and distribution of his comedies. The venture was very successful.

He had come from Texas, made his stage debut at 8 with the late Frank Bacon's stock company, and arrived in the movies via the vaudeville route.

Soon the newspapers were carrying stories about Arbuckle's $20,000 automobile, especially built for his great bulk, and noting other extravagances. He was said to be generous to a fault and a great spender.

DEATH BROKE CAREER

Then the story broke that removed Fatty from the screen. The district attorney of San Francisco was investigating the death of Virginia Rappe, a minor screen actress, who had died in Arbuckle's rooms in San Francisco.

Arbuckle was tried on a charge of murder, but was acquitted.

Arbuckle was virtually forced out of the movies and the opposition to his return was unrelenting for years.

Arbuckle was married three times. His former wives being Doris Deane and Minta Durfee.

BODY TO LIE IN STATE

Arbuckle's body will lie in state Saturday at the place where thousands battled seven years ago for a last look upon the face of Rudolph Valentino.

The remains will be on public view in the room of the funeral church at Broadway and 66th st. from early morning until the funeral services at 1 p. m., but already attendants are making plans to avoid another such crush.

Glass windows are being reinforced, furniture is being moved and arrangements are being made for extra police reserves. Arbuckle's body will be cremated.

Moley Shies at Web in Grand Parlor of Diplomatic Spiders

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, engaged by International News Service to report on the World Economic Conference, today continues his description of the proceedings.

By James J. "Jimmy" Walker

Copyright, 1933, by International News Service.

Geological Museum, London, June 29 (INS)—Yankee Doodle Moley, a. George M. Cohan might call him, arrived late the night before last and is still here—very still, in fact.

All the diplomatic spiders who have been waiting for him with a "come into my parlor" idea found the professor too fly for their plot, and all they caught of him was the back of his neck as he entered Claridge's Hotel to report and confer with his chief, Secretary of State Hull.

James J. Walker

Moley Won't Put His Head on Block

This upset all the dope and put the committee on whispering propaganda to rout. They had previously succeeded in selling the story that asistant Secretary of State Moley was coming from President Roosevelt directly to the "steering committee of the conference with a value full of lowdown," and that he'd ignore the American delegation, pass them up like a defeated delegation and maybe humilate them for not agreeing to scrap foreign debts and stand for immediate stabilization of currencies.

If Mr. Moley is head of the President's "Brain Trust" there is no doubt he has a head to offer and it's my guess he's going to keep it on and not carelessly thrust it onto any international block for decapitation.

He ran the gauntlet of the pressing press, a hundred expert cross examiners, and it looks as if he hasn't gone off the golden standard of silence, for all they got was a plain, simple statement that could well be used for a copybook to the effect he was bringing the last word on American conditions to the American delegates and that he would take back to the President the latest reports from his conference delegation.

Signals All Wrong; They Can't Take Him

In football vernacular, they thought they had our signals and expected the delegates from home to telegraph their punches, but to me it still looks as if Uncle Sam is playing possum and letting them all outsmart themselves.

As America continues to improve at home she will become more essential to the conference and the conference less necessary to America. No one would refuse to agree that international co-operation is required in the general field of welfare but it is only part of the whole field demanding extraordinary effort.

Europe is willing quietly to admit the improvement in the United States is something that must be protected by the American delegation.

Conference Like a Rip Van Winkle Party

Inspired by reports of the American pick-up, people over here are turning to their governments with a demand for similar results. In fact, the charge is made against the present English Government that it used the coming of the conference not as a stimulus for action, but as an excuse for inaction in domestic affairs.

Mr. Roosevelt refused to wait; they say, for the conference or anything else. His policy of public works, currency and credit expansion, higher prices, higher wages, shorter working hours and more jobs is striking the world as a better idea than big conferences and long speeches.

However, Mr. Moley is here and here he will remain for nine days, but he will be more than a nine-day wonder if he can wake up this Rip Van Winkle party.

U. S. PEACE BIDS CONFIRMED

Berlin, June 29—Countless lives could have been spared in the World War but for Franco-Italian territorial aspirations, former Hungarian Foreign Affairs Minister Gustav Gratz said today, confirming that peace bids were made to the United States by the Central Powers long before the World War Armistice of November 11, 1918.

Revelation of the peace bids were made by the United States yesterday, Gratz said:

"In June, 1918, former President Wilson received the first Austro-Hungarian offer of peace through the King of Spain. This offer was repeated in September.

"On September 17, 1918, Baron Burian, Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, again proposed an armistice.

"All offers were refused by the Italians and French for reasons of territorial aspirations. The world could have been spared not one, or two, but many months of war and bloodshed."

Sawyer in Fight to Cure Police Ills

The grand jury's report on the Boston police department today was cited by Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, a just one more reason for the creation of a commission to revise the state's criminal laws. Sawyer introduced an order for such a commission some time ago and expects a hearing on it next week.

A police shake-up is not enough to rid the state of the gangster menace, according to Sawyer. Modernization of the law is needed to deal with th eproblem effectively. The Boston American was lauded by the Ware legislator for its efforts to arouse officials and the public to the gangster menace.

Father of Dry Law Loses Prohibition Post

St. Paul, Minn., June 29—Former Congressman Andrew J. Volstead, famous as the author of the act enforcing the 18th amendment, has fallen a victim to the federal economy program.

He was given an "indefinite furlough" from his position here as a legal adviser to the eighth district prohibition administrator. With him went the administrator, Robert D Ford and six deputy state administrators.

Air Aces to Fete Mary Pickford at Ball

Los Angeles, June 29—Mary Pickford, who in 1919 at the first Los Angeles air circus became the country's honorary ace, receiving the title on authorization of the War Department, will be the guest of honor tonight at the inaugural ball, the first event of the national air races.

Jimmy Haslip of St. Louis, winner of last year's Bendix trophy race, who flew here with his wife, announced he will not be able to make a defense of his title in the transcontinental dash because he cannot get his racing monoplane of the late Jerry Jamieson in condition for that event.

It is hard for us to realize that we live at the bottom of an ocean of atmosphere some 500 miles deep, as deep sea fish live at the bottom of another ocean made of water, a different mixture of hydrogen and oxygen.

While man goes up ten miles physically, taking his body with him, scientists in Chicago learn that the government bureau of standards has devised an "electrical ladder," an arrangement of receiving and sending radio, that will take the intellect of man, with his body, 550 miles up into the air.

This scientific ladder will enable scientists to study conditions in the ionosphere, the outer layer of our "air ocean," where the process of ionization is supposed to be carried on by the energy of the sun, 93,000,000 miles farther out in space.

Man is a queer little creature, who insists on fighting, cheating, oppressing the poor and accumulating what he doesn't need. But he is also an able little creature, ceaselessly working to extend dominion over the earth and reaching out for knowledge into the outside universe.

The Japanese navy, exploring and charting islands in the Pacific, reports that one island, called Ganges Island, named for the "sacred river" in India, has entirely disappeared. This island, on the route from southern Japan to Hawaii, has sunk beneath the waves, whence it rose sometime in the past. Its vanishing makes little difference to the big world on which it was a tiny spot.

Some day this island we call the earth will freeze up, lose the sun's light perhaps, and be marked off the chart of active interstellar islands by scientists of some higher planet in another solar system, and that won't make much difference to the universe.

LIBBY'S BABY HEIR TO MILLIONS IS ONLY PAL SHE WANTS

TORCH SINGER ASKS TO BE LET ALONE

Guarded at 25-Room R. I. Villa; Shuns All Save Her Friends

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Copyright, 1933, by Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

Watch Hill, R. I., June 29—"Moanin' low" with a right to sing the blues, Libby Holman Reynolds minus a drop and footlights, but with the span of the Atlantic before her, today warbled a new and plaintive melody as she begged the public to forget her and permit her to live in and enjoy seclusion.

The former Broadway torch singer who once thrilled to public acclaim and recognition now wants solitude and privacy.

Libby is washed up with the public. She wants that definitely understood she made known in what, no doubt, is her final public message.

Once she paid press agents to herald her name that as a theatrical celebrity the public might not forget her. Today she pays armed detectives to protect her and her baby against intrusion that the public might forget her.

WITH BOSOM FRIENDS

With her infant son, Smith Reynolds, 2d, heir to the Reynolds' tobacco millions, the former bluest of the bluesingers wants to be left alone, "alone for good," she announced, to be happy with the simple pleasures of life through companionship with only a few intimates.

Clad in a white bathing suit, a contrast to her already tanned body, Libby, as she talked, was sunning herself on the beach sands fronting Rim Rock, the 25-room palatial villa she has leased for the summer. With her, enjoying similarly the warmth as well as the cool ocean breezes were Clifton Webb, Broadway dancer with whom she formerly co-starred in several revues, and his mother, both her house guests; Mrs. Louisa du Pont Carpenter Jenny, one of the Delaware du Ponts, her friend and constant companion, and a nurse.

"I want to be left alone—for his sake. I don't belong to the public anymore. I belong to him. I am out of public life for good. I want to live quietly, like everybody has a right to," she spoke on.

A BIT THINNER

"RIM ROCK," 25-ROOM PALACE AT WATCH HILL

MRS. JENNY LIBBY HOLMAN REYNOLDS

EXCLUSIVE!

Here are Libby and Mrs. Jenny on the sands. The widow of Smith Reynolds, her life blackened by tragedy, asks the public to forget her and to let her live only for her baby—heir to Reynolds tobacco millions—and for her friends. BETTE DAVIS WARNS OF TOO MUCH LOVE

If you're madly in love, don't marry.

If someone is "your everything," go into bankruptcy.

But don't marry if you're in love.

"That would be a mistake," said blonde Bette Davis, former Newton high school girl, now of Hollywood.

Bette was inspired today to give her views on what she calls "modern marriage" by a Hollywood rumor that she and her band-leading husband, Harmon O. Nelson, Jr., a former Whitinsville boy, whom she married only last August, were on the verge of a marital crack-up.

GET IN, BUT DON'T FALL

"Take the case of Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.," said Bette. "They fell in love. That's where they made their mistake.

"I don't think anyone who falls in love should marry."

But, you young swains, before you stop off at the genral store to buy a horsewhip for your best girl, read on. Bette's views were probably affected somewhat by the terrific heat which has been burning up points west, including Hollywood, for the past two days.

After blaming love for all the divorces in the news, Bette admits that she is in love with her husband.

"Of course, we're terribly in love, but we're not infatuated. Harmon and I had known each other for over eight years before we married. We had been all through the infatuation stage, years ago. We're really good friends now. We know how to take each other."

WHEN NOT TO MARRY.

But, almost in the same breath, Bette says:

"Anyone who fails in love should never get married. It's too awful getting used to that, let alone trying to get along with someone, besides, in the same house."

Bette admitted that she and her husband get along fine. He's a New York fiddling & radio tract. She's in Hollywood.

Bette, who in her high school days was Ruth Elizabeth Davis, really means that people who are infatuated with each other shouldn't get married.

RULES FOR THE CONTEST

Here's how to tell whether you're infatuated, which means you're just plain "daffy" over a girl, or whether you are really and truly and surely in love with her.

If the girl should ask you to tease up a hornet's nest and you do it, you're infatuated.

But on the other hand, if the girl should ask you to tear up a hornets' nest, and you do it, you're in love.

BEATINGS LIMIT FOR THIS WIFE

Mrs. Viola Hume of Malden was willing to forgive and forget an occasional beating by her husband during their five years of married life, but when, in October, 1932, he hurled her across the living-room, that was too much, and she left him.

In Middlesex probate court today Mrs. Hume described the beatings and was granted a divorce from Clark Hume, also of Malden.

Mrs. Ethel Ramsden of Auburndale was granted a divorce from Horace A. Ramsden for desertion.

Costello Widow Has 'Ace Up Sleeve' to End Trial

A suprise that will end her poison murder trial in ten days or less was promised today by Attorney William E. O'Brine, associated in the defence of Mrs. Jessie B. Costello.

"I am convinced that if the trial starts as scheduled on July 12," said O'Brine, "it will be over by the 22n. We have testimony that will eliminate the ceiling of several witnesses."

O'Brin erefused to say what this testimony is. His only comment was that it would be "a great surprise" when heard in court. ... As usual, Mrs. Costello was visited today by her three children. They go to Salem jail almost daily in company of their maternal grandfather, Andrew Fyfe.

Bobbie, 2½, the youngest of the children, thinks his mother is in the hospital, and every day he asks when she will be well enough to return home.

MISSING WIFE IS FEARED DEAD

Mrs. Louise L. Dow, 23-year-old Wakefield mother, sought by Reading and Wakefield police since her disappearance last Sunday, is now feared to have accidentally drowned or to have met with foul play.

Mrs. Dow left the home of her mother, Mrs. Lester Meuse, of Elm st., Wakefield, where she had been living since separating from her husband Louise L. Dow four years ago, to go swimming, she said.

Guinan Dow, estranged husband of the missing woman, is now living in New Brunswick. They have one son, Edward G. Dow, 4, who lives with Mrs. Meuse.

Drowning Man Pulls Girl to Bottom

Methuen, June 29—When Albert F. Wright, 20, of Canton st., Lawrence, seized his sweetheart, Mary Mulligan, 23, of High st., Lawrence, about the neck while they were both swimming in the waters of Forest Lake, late last night, she thought he was "just fooling."

Within a few seconds, when she was more than 30 feet below the surface of the water, she was faced with the sudden realization that she had been the "last straw" Wright had grasped at to save himself from drowning, and for several minutes she was forced to wage a life and death battle near the bottom of the lake to save her own life.

The body of Wright, who had become a victim of a heart attack, was found in the water after the police had dragged the lake until the early hours today.

Mother Loses 8-Year Court Fight to Get Back Daughter

Ending eight years of battling in the courts, Catherine L. Hurley, a stenographer, of Bowman st., Neponset, lost finally today in Supreme Court her attempt to regain custody of her daughter, now more than 16 years old.

In a decision handed down by the full bench of Supreme Court, the mother is barred from appealing a decree of the Bristol County probate court on December 31, 1925, awarding the little girl to a Taunton couple because the mother failed to institute proceedings within a year.

The probate court decree granted adoption of the girl, Adelaide, by William and Eva St. Martin of Taunton.

Adelaide was born Dec. 16, 1918, at St. Mary's Infant Asylum, Dorchester, and in 1920 the mother signed an adoption agreement at the asylum. In 1921 Frank and Grace Rancourt of Maine adopted the girl, but when Mrs. Rancourt died in 1924 Rancourt assented to adoption of Adelaide by Mr. and Mrs. St. Martin.

The Infant asylum opposed this adoption, however, and an agent of the institution, according to the records, spirited the girl away from a Taunton school and returned her to the asylum.

Through habeas corpus proceedings, the St. Martins had the girl produced in court and the probate court order allowed them to adopt her.

More than a year later—which was why the full bench adverse decision was handed down today—the natural mother attempted to start proceedings to have this adoption vacated.

LUDENDORFF IN HITLER BLAST

Munich, Germany, June 29 (INS)—Breaking through the confines of a muzzled press, General Erich Von Ludendorf, German World War hero and co-author with Chancellor Hitler of a revolutionary attempt in 1923, launched a devastating attack upon the Nazi regime today.

In his newspaper Volkswarte, Ludendorff characterized himself as a "better Nazi" than the present leaders of the party, violently assailed Germany's imitation of Italian Fascism and pointedly warned Hitler of the fate that befell Kaiser Wilhelm II.

"He tried to establish a Reich without Socialist support, but the Socialists took power from him. The Nazis want to establish a third Reich with the help of the Catholic Church, but they'll live to see what course things will take."

Prussian Churches Taken Over by Nazis

Berlin, June 29 (INS)—With Chancellor Adolph Hitler's concept of a one-party state on the verge of realization, the Nazi party took over administration of all Protestant churches in Prussia today.

U. S. HELPS IN TRUST PROBE

Washington officials who are probing the affairs of the Federal National Bank today joined forces with the state officials who are centering their fire just now on the Inman Trust Company of Cambridge, one of the affiliates of the Federal National.

Action by the Middlesex grand jury on the Inman Trust case next month promises to bring into the open for the first time the secrets and alleged irregularities which led to the $30,000,000 crash of the parent bank and its chain of seven or eight subsidiaries.

The transactions of the Inman Trust are so badly tied up with the Federal National that the agents of U. S. Atty. Gen. Homer S. Cummings who have been here for the past three weeks are continually discovering new and interwoven trails.

That was why Bank Commissioner Guy recently made available to the Washington officials the files and records in his office relative to the Inman Trust and other affiliates.

One Number Tells Who Hit and Ran

Patchwork Dry Force Scrapped; 'Butcher, Baker' Snoopers Out

"Butchers, bakers and candlestick makers," or—to be more exact—butchers, policemen, chauffeurs, lawyers and tire salesmen were all deemed equally well qualified to keep a snooper's eye peeled on New England's drinking during the prohibition era.

This patch-quilt makeup of the prohibition enforcement bureau's personnel was revealed today by John Morrill, administrator for the New England district, in corroborating in his Boston office announcement that 15 investigators throughout Massachusetts would be dropped from the force at the end of tomorrow's business day. He said that 22 other dry agents in other New England states, as well as 13 office employes, are also to be "furloughed."

Morrill refused to divulge the names of those to be dropped or their previous occupations, lest they be recognized by the public. It has always been the policy of the prohibition enforcement authorities to keep the identity of their agents as secret as possible.

Morrill did reveal that investigators had been hired from all walks of life, and that former policemen, butchers, lawyers and chauffeurs predominated.

Only 29 Chip In for Esplanade Concerts

Voltaire once told Frederick the Great of Prussia, who was a bit of a musician on the side, that good music was above all price. And Boston agrees with Voltaire, it appeared today.

Of the 200,000 persons who last summer enjoyed Arthur Fiedler's Esplanade Concerts, only 29 so far have made contributions to the fund that is to defray this year's riverbank musicales.

So far but $8336 is available for the 18 concerts to be played by the Boston Symphonic Orchestra. But 10 days remaion before the first concert is to be presented.

40 OUSTED IN CUT AT VETS' BUREAU

Employees of the veterans' bureau who are to be furloughed from July 1 to Aug. 1, according to orders received here from Washington today were of the opinion the layoff was a prelude to final discharge.

Col. William J. Blake, regional manager, admitted today that orders for the placing of 40 to 50 employes of the bureau on the one-month furlough came to him from Washington yesterday.

He said the employes with the shortest terms of service and the least number of merit credits would be those affected by the furlough order.

Col. Blake said the only orders he has to date are that the employes are to be furloughed from July 1 to Aug. 1. However, many employes are of the opinion that those who are furloughed will not be recalled to service unless the disabled veterans, who survive the compensation cuts, are to be given the benefit of re-examination and treatment.

It was pointed out that there would not be work enough for all the employes of the veterans' bureau here if there were no cases to handle. The furlough order comes close on the heels of orders to discharge eight doctors, almost half the medical staff at the bureau.

It was learned at the bureau that the majority of veterans, particularly those who served overseas, are satisfied with the final program of the economy act. Under the new schedule they cannot be cut more than 25 per cent of the amount they actually received before the first big slash was made.

Flagpole Bends and Painter Is Hurt

West Springfield, June 29 (AP)—Arthur F. Gouchoe is in critical condition in a hospital with a skull fracture as the result of an unusual accident. He was engaged in painting the 52-foot flagpole on the grounds of the American Legion building, which is of iron, when the pole bent at the base under his weight and he was hurled to the ground with it. In addition to the skull injury he suffered a broken arm and wrist.

Boston Teacher Becomes Bride

Teachers crowded St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, for the wedding today of Miss Florence J. Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Hughes, 24 Stonehurst st., Dorchester, to Francis P. Carroll, chairman of the Watertown school board and junior master in the Boston Latin School. Miss Hughes teaches biology in South Boston High School.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Leo N. O'Day. The bride was attended by her sisters, Miss Agnes L. Hughes, Miss Helen S. Hughes and Miss Julia Morrissey. Maurice Carroll, brother of the groom, was best man.

Backward Race Is Feature of American Skate Derby

Just watch those old boards of the roller skate floor burn up when Virginia Dullea, of Eustis st., Roxbury, gets going in the Boston American's Skate Derby, to be held at the Boston Arena on Saturday afternoon, July 22. Young and old, boys and girls, men and women, will all be on skates, and will fight it out for the title of the best roller skater in Metropolitan Boston. Virginia says she'll be right out in front when the winners are picked and plans to do a big job practicing on the wooden floors so that she will "know the ground."

Flood of Entries for the Contests Prove Popularity

The backward skating events on the program of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser roller skating derby in Boston Arena, Saturday afternoon, July 22, seem to tickle the fancy of many youngsters, judging from the large number entering.

Although many persons have difficulty in maintaining their balance while skating forward there are a large number of boys and girls, also men and women, who get a big "kick" out of skating backwards.

Remember where the preliminaries will be held on Saturday, July 15—one week prior to the finals at the Arena. Cut this out and paste it up somewhere so you won't forget. The scene of the preliminaries will be Charlesbank playground, Leverett and Cambridge sts., West End; Paris st. playground, East Boston (where new granolithic walks are being constructed); Strandway, South Boston, near Columbus Park Beach (roped off area); and Franklin Park Greeting, near entrance to Franklin Park. Pick the place in this list nearest your home and go there to take part in the preliminaries. You can't enter the finals unless you win a place in the preliminaries.

Mattern May Be Living on Game

Khabarovsk, Siberia, June 29 (AP)—Soviet guards and sailors continued to search for Jimmie Mattern north of here today, but the belief grew the American aviator had been forced down southwest of Khabarovsk, whence he took off for Alaska June 15.

Mattern carried a rifle, ammunition, and fishing tackle, so if he were forced down on a remote island safely he could easily survive for a long time, aviation experts said.

SHOWDOWN ON U. S. DOLLAR DEMANDED

The Dollar Fight

(By the Associated Press)

The gold bloc nations served a currency stabilization ultimatum at the World Economic Conference today as the dollar plunged deeper in foreign exchanges.

The gold bloc, headed by France, declared they would quit the conference unless something was done immediately to bring about stabilization.

In London the dollar slumped at $4.41¼ and in Paris to 19.53 francs.

The French proposed that the London conference bring about agreements which would pool all commercial shipping in a combine operating with one account for receipts and expenses.

British delegates were said to have prepared a compromise plan which they hope would overcome the conference deadlock.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Geological Museum, London, June 29 (INS)—The European gold bloc countries, attempting to force the United States to enter a currency stabilization agreement at once, demanded a showdown at the World Economic Conference late today.

Led by the Dutch and Swiss delegations and supported by the French and Belgians, the gold bloc groups, called upon Premier MacDonald and insisted upon a conference declaration in favor of stabilization in some form, even if it affected only European currencies.

SHOWDOWN NEXT WEEK

They demand this declaration be followed by de facto stabilization of the dollar by the end of next week.

Dr. Hendryk Colijn, head of the Dutch delegation and chairman of the conference finance commission, made this announcement after the gold bloc representatives had met MacDonald earlier in the day.

MacDonald previously had conferred with Prof. Raymond Moley, American assistant secretary of state, and President Roosevelt's special emmissary to the conference.

MOLEY'S STATEMENT

Asked if stabilization had been discussed at this meeting Moley replied,

"Our discussion was general and not on that subject."

Britain stood with the United States in reiterating President Roosevelt's contention that no beneficial results can accrue from stabilization until the price level has been increased.

Prof. Moley's meeting with the American delegation marked the first time he has sat in on such a confab. He gave them a picture of conditions at home and they gave him an account of the situation here.

KAHN EXPLAINS LOSS BY SALE TO DAUGHTER

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 29 (INS)—Otto H. Kahn, head of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York private bankers, took a $117,584 loss on his income tax for 1930 by a sale of stocks to his daughter, Mrs. Maud E. Marriot, he testified today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Kahn explained he made the sale on December 30, 1930. Three months later, he re-acquired the stocks when his daughter assigned them to him. The double transaction, termed "illegal" by a government field agent, later was upheld by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

NEW HOLE IN LAW

The incident revealed another loophole in the income tax laws and enabled Kahn to escape federal income taxes for the year 1930.

Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, asked Kahn to explain the assignment of stocks from his daughter. The assignment was dated Dec. 31, 1930, a day after he had sold her the same stocks. Kahn said it actually was executed in March, 1931.

"You are the first New York banker who has admitted to this committee that the bears were able to depress the market," said Senator Steiwer (R) of Oregon.

KAHN RAPS "BEAR CLIQUES"

Kahn answered: "Bear cliques undoubtedly cause market demoralization, detrimental to the country. "I think that when they say 'now, we'll raid, now we'll scare people out of their socks! They are doing a social injury."

"The laws of the jungle once prevailed. Thirty years have come and gone. We have a new deal now."

The biz flier which America took in foreign loan fields was excused by Kahn on the score that "we were a young nation just learning."

Testifying that sale of stocks at the end of the tax year was "sort of an annual custom" with him, Kahn recommended repeal of the capital gains clause of the tax law

Children Starving, So He Kills Them

Muskogee, Okla., June 29 (AP)—Jap Ingram, 35-year-old father who said, "I don't know whether I'm sorry or not," today was accused of slaying his two small children. Neighbors told officers that Ingram, estranged from his wife, went to a little cotton farm near Cowela, wounded two of his wife's relatives, and then, patting his little son and daughter on the head, led them to the farmhouse wall and shot them down. He didn't want them to starve, he said.

Van Amburg Pins Death Bullets on 2

Capt. Charles J. Van Amburg, state ballistic expert, testified today in Salem superior court that the bullets removed from the body of Patrolman Francis V. Quinn of Lynn were fired from guns which the prosecution declares were in the hands of Joseph Scrow of Cambridge and Tony Buffa of Lynn.

The state claims Scrow fired the first shot from a 32-calibre revolver and that Buffa fired from a 38-calibre gun. Scrow, Buffa and Edward R. A. Cullen of Salem are on trial.

Washington, June 29 (AP)—The radio commission has notified Sen. Lonergan (D., Ct.) today it had approved the application of Station WDRC of Hartford for an increase in power from 500 to 1000 watts. Long Illness Fatal

GEE! I MISSED YOU, PAL!

Harold Newcomb, 14, of Newton, and his pet dog, Brownie, restored to him after being impounded by police. Harold, a golf caddy at Woodland club, ran afoul of poison ivy on a short cut home and, unable to return to his job, lacked money to pay the dog's license. So police put Brownie in the canine housegaw. A friendly storekeeper, hearing of Harold's plight, donated the necessary $2 license fee and so we see boy and dog in happy reunion. Davis to Go Back to Geneva; Hopeful Report to Chief Lakemans' Bay, Roque Island, June 29 (INS)—Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's special ambassador, was under orders today to return to Geneva to renew American efforts for disarmament toward which the chief executive feels public opinion in Europe is progressing.

A hopeful report on prospects for world peace and disarmament was presented Mr. Roosevelt by the ambassador as they chatted below deck in the fog-bound Amberjack II.

Mr. Davis was instructed to return within a week or 10 days and push toward a general agreement at the long drawn-out Geneva conference.

The President made it clear, however, that American offers for consultation when peace is threatened are based entirely on a disarmed Europe.

Davis said Mr. Roosevelt's plea for peace and his offer for a non-aggression pact had made a "tremendous effect over there."

"Europe had made up its mind," he said, "that it is to be either peace or chaos. This is the greatest progress. Public opinion is developing for disarmament. The people are still a little nervous and we must have a little time to settle some of the political problems."

The future rested to a great extent, he said, on stabilization of the German government.

At the conclusion of his talk with Mr. Roosevelt, today, Davis will board the destroyer Hernadou to return to Boston.

Fog Lifts for Last Leg of F. D.'s Cruise

Welchpool, N. B., June 29 (AP)—An electrical storm broke over Passamaquoddy Bay today, dissipating fog and indicating clear weather for the last leg of President Roosevelt's cruise to Campobello Island.

A holiday atmosphere was abroad in this quiet fishing village. The Stars and Stripes and Union Jack flew along the streets and on the Long wharf where the President planned to land this afternoon, weather permitting.

Premier L. P. D. Tilley of New Brunswick was here to greet Mr. Roosevelt, and Dr. Murray MacLaren, minister of pensions in the Dominion government, was expected to extend the greetings of Canada.

The mess was also embellished by a mince pie sent to the schooner by Mrs. Beatrice Kelly, of Jonesport, and a batch of hot biscuits from Mrs. Harry Woodward, who lives on a nearby island.

May Open Palestine to Nazi Refugees

New York, June 29 (INS)—Plans for a $25,000,000 colonization program for Palestine, to care for 250,000 refugees from alleged Nazi persecution in Germany, were being considered by Jewish leaders today.

The program was outlined by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Hebrew University at Jerusalem, to leaders assembled at a dinner in his honor.

Willimantic Thread Workers' Pay Raised

Willimantic, Ct., June 29 (INS)—The American Thread Co. today announced a 12½ per cent wage increase effective July 31 for all-day and piece workers here, more than 1500 persons.

Reports that similar wage increases have been ordered for the company's plants at Fall River and Holyoke, Mass., could not be confirmed.

Newton Dogs Free; What of It? Asks Man Left Alone

Newton dogs, under restraint for the past month, were allowed to roam at large today.

"I wonder," said the editor, "how it feels for a dog to be allowed his freedom after being kept indoors for a month. Now if dogs could only talk."

"Pardon me," spoke up a meek looking stranger who overheard the conversation. "But maybe if you asked me how it feels for a dog to be let loose after 30 days' confinement, I could tell you. You see, I'm a married man, have been for 20 years, although it seems like a hundred, and my wife has just gone to California.

"Well, sir, the exalted feeling of freedom one feels being released from restraint is hard to describe. It's like as if the whole world was receding in front of you, and no matter how far you walked, the world would be just as big as it ever was.

"You can go wherever you want, but, of course, I don't go round any garbage barrels, like a dog would.

"And, of course, I don't bark, or shout with joy, like a dog would, or go snapping at people.

"I walked away to the woods today, like the dogs do with their little masters, who seem just as happy and lively as their pets. Yes, sir, it's a great feeling to be free.

"But, funny, and you mightn't believe me, I kind of miss the wife. And getting your own meals isn't any fun. And I'll be hanged if feeding isn't just an idea. I'll bet the dogs feel that way, too."

BABY HEIR TO RICHES LIBBY'S ONLY PAL

...n inexplicable sadness. Her black ...ury hair is not sleeked down, ...ather she lets it "go native," ...rushed away from her forehead ...ce it is a bushy clump of ...ght ringlets hugging her head.

She is a bit thinner but she still retains her well defined curves, that once clothed in flimsy tightness lent a sensuous something to the songs she ruefully crooned about "my man. I love him so! . . . "this is how the story ends, he's going to turn me down and say: can't we be friends" . . . or ". . . body and soul . . ."

More than a fortnight ago Libby and her chum, Mrs. Jenney tried to slip unobtrusively into Watch Hill. Libby had quietly rented from Carl Sturhan, Connecticut insurance man, the mansion at the edge of the ocean. With them they brought three detectives and a Great Dane dog, as large as a pony as assurance of their privacy.

Soon word spread that Libby Holman Reynolds, widow of Smith Reynolds mysteriously slain last year, and her baby reputed to be "the world's richest baby" had moved into the select and exclusive summer colony.

And frantic Libby realized that here where millions mean very little, so many colonists are millionaires, she was again to be the cynosure of public eyes.

But she has tried to pass it off. She comes and goes as the mood moves her and is frequently seen either at the controls of her $3000 speed boat or pedalling her bicycle through the village.

In jaunty shorts she moves about like a summerite in the hope that her indifference to scrutiny might prove a defense mechanism against such scrutiny.

ENJOYS WATER

"They even got it about that Libby hired detectives because of a kidnaping threat against her baby," Mrs. Jenney spoke up in defense of the former star. "Why that's absurd. There never was any such a threat and there isn't as iota of truth to the report. Naturally she needed protection against intruders that she could move about her land in peace and so she hired three men to do it.

"Libby has a right to be a private individual and the public ought to realize it. She is a young girl and the mother of a boy. She wants to bring him up like every mother does—naturally and simply, amid quiet surroundings. She doesn't want people trying to take a peek at him. Nobody pays attention to me. Why should Libby be watched and followed to see what she does and where she goes?"

Libby enjoys immensely the running upon boat. With Mrs. Jenney weather permitting, she takes afternoon spins through the harbor, cycling to the dock where the Water Boy is launched.

Rim Rock is hidden from view along the main highway, nestled among trees many yards to off the road between here and Westerly. The back of the house is only the front and face, the water, a broad veranda joining the protecting sides of the mansion.

Here on the broad sweep of the open porch runs Smith Reynolds. If, in his carriage most of the day. Only when Libby goes down to the beach for a swim is the infant removed, carriage and all to the ocean-swept sands.

FOURTH IN OHIO

Three maids, a nurse, cook, chauffeur, and three detectives together with a Great Dane mastiff comprise Libby's menage. On them she depends for the management of the estate while she devotes herself practically entirely to her young son for whose well-being she purposely came to Watch Hill, an unusually cool spot in the warm-weather months.

Serious about shunning public friendship, Libby has refrained from making friends with her neighbors. Asking intently that she be left alone, she is leaving others alone, also.

However, tonight Libby will treat herself to a brief vacation with her parents in Cincinnati. She will leave for Ohio to spend the Fourth of July holiday with them, planning to return to her villa the end of next week.

She will go alone, entrusting the care of the Reynolds' heir to the nurse and his protection to the 24-hour armed sentinel. Mrs. Alfred Hochstein, Libby's mother, may return with her to spend the balance of the summer at Rim Rock.

Beauty Judges! Here's Second Fair One for Your Approval

Here you are—start right now and fill that life long desire of becoming a judge in a beauty contest. Of course you know a beautiful girl when you see one, but if you can put into 100 words or less a definition of your ideal of feminine beauty you stand a chance to win a free trip to the World's Fair in Chicago.

HAS BROWN EYES

Remember you are one of the judges in this unusual beauty contest. How does Miss Ingraham compare with the beauty we printed yesterday? We will give you a brief description of Miss Ingraham to help you in choosing your favorite beauty from among the 18 pictures which will be published in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. Miss Ingraham has dark brown hair and brown eyes. She is five feet four and one-half inches tall and weighs 116 pounds.

Now what ever you do withhold your final judgment on feminine beauty until you see the other 16 pictures. Another picture will be published tomorrow and each day thereafter until the complete set of 18 pictures have been printed.

After you select one of these chorus girls as your ideal of a beautiful girl then write your reasons for the choice and send it in with the complete set of pictures or tracings of the pictures.

ADDITIONAL AWARDS

The trip to the World's Fair is something to win. It has been arranged by the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser through the Bauer Travel Service, 152 Tremont st., Boston, to offer two trips for the best two definitions of feminine beauty.

The winners of these trips also will visit Niagara Falls, the Shrine of the Little Flower and home of Father Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich., and Belle Isle Park in Detroit.

There also will be 50 additional awards of two tickets each to "Gold Diggers of 1933" at the Majestic theater.

Rules of Contest

Beginning Wednesday, June 28, and continuing for the next 13 days (excepting July 4) the Boston Evening American each week day and Boston Sunday Advertiser each Sunday will publish a picture of a beautiful chorus girl in the musical picture "Gold Diggers of 1933." The last picture will be published July 16 in the Sunday Advertiser.

The idea of this Beauty Judging Contest is to select from the 18 pictures the most beautiful girl and then in 100 words or less write the reason for the selection.

The complete set of pictures or tracings and the definition of feminine beauty must be submitted in one package.

It is not necessary to purchase a copy of the Boston American or Sunday Advertiser to become a contestant. Both newspapers will be on file at the publication office and in public libraries and the pictures as therein printed may be traced and duplicated.

You are permitted as many complete sets of pictures or tracings and definitions of feminine beauty as you desire, but only one prize will be awarded to any contestant.

The two entrants who submit the two best definitions of feminine beauty each will be awarded an eight-day trip (all expenses paid) to the World's Fair in Chicago. The trip will be arranged for the winning contestants by the Bauer Travel Service, 152 Tremont st., Boston.

The next best definitions of feminine beauty will be awarded two tickets each to "Gold Diggers of 1933" now showing at the Majestic theater.

The contest is open to everybody with the exception of employes of Hearst newspapers or immediate members of their families.

All entries must be mailed or brought in before midnight Monday, July 17. Entries with insufficient postage will not be accepted. Be sure to send your entry first class mail. No entries will be returned.

The decision of the judges will be final and all contestants agree to abide by their rulings. In event of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. The winners will be notified as soon as the judges reach their decisions.

Send entries to "Beauty Judging Contest," Boston American, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

Amo Ingraham was chosen by Warren William, one of the stars in "Gold Diggers of 1933," as the most beautiful girl in the chorus. Do you agree with Mr. William? This is the second picture for you to judge in the Boston Evening American "Beauty Judging Contest."

A sudden notice arrives from the sponsor announcing that the President's secretary will have a substitute for July 2, the sub being Secretary Ickes, of the Interior Department . . . Temperament filters as far away from the microphone, sometimes, as the inner offices of prospective show angels . . . There was the canning firm which set a big agency abuzz last week . . . It wanted a big show, with Jack Benny, Harry Richman and Leo Reisman . . . The agency sounded 'em all out and much money was spent on the feelers . . . They even auditioned Jolson—and that's supposed to be how Al landed on the Whiteman bill . . . But the entertainers were so willing to take the jobs, the canners canned the whole idea.

NEW VALLEE DISCOVERIES

Rudy Vallee has made another discovery—in fact, two of them . . . While driving to Rye the other evening he turned on the auto radio and heard two lads, the Hertz brothers, playing the saxophone and accordion at WAAT . . . He was so struck with them that they came to network with him on an imminent Thursday night show . . . WABC will try to startle blase listeners by broadcasting from the Chicago Exposition tomorrow afternoon with a field transmitter, which will take the audience for a ride over lagoons and roller coasters . . . "Showboat" and the American Album of Music have renewed with NBC . . . Jack Miller, the accompanist of Kate Smith, gets his own spot Saturdays, 6:15 p. m., with Nat Bruce, at WABC . . . Jack Parker, of the Men About Town, is limping around town with a fractured ankle . . . The Revellers are not going abroad this year, and the European bookers are worrying them with cables and asking for recommendations for substitutes . . . Ernie Holtz, who succeeded Don Bestor on Lexington ave., has signed for the summer and maintains an NBC schedule.

WHITEMAN PLANS

Paul Whiteman, probably, will carry on next week, during his two-hour show, assigned only by Deems Taylor . . . Deems, by the way, added to the studio epigrams, when he quipped after the announcer's revelation to the audience that "This is WEAF, New York," the following: "Now that you are sure of what station this is, shall we proceed?" . . . The likelihood is that in subsequent Whiteman airshows, two big names will be tagged onto the bill—one doing a show on the first half, and the other, during the second hour . . . Jack Benny is Hollywood bound . . . "If I had news, isn't it," he asked, "that I'm going to the Coast —not to make a picture?" . . . He did the actual signing for his comeback for the auto-sponsors yesterday, and will resume with the same cast, including Mary Livingstone, and the golden-voiced Jimmy Melton.

N. E. PRESENTS TEXTILE VIEW

Washington, June 29 (AP)—New Hampshire mill workers protested to the industrial recovery administration today that the $11 weekly minimum wage provided for them in the code proposed to govern the industry is "unfair," and the 40 hours a week stipulated as a maximum "is a mite too high."

The hearing in the Department of Commerce was attended by many representatives of industry and labor to be affected by the new law.

John L. Barry—representing the New Hampshire Federation of Labor—said he appeared at the request of Gov. Winant to represent the state's workers in textile mills.

He contended the 40-hour-week would not greatly restore employment there.

"What evidence have you the $11 is too low?" asked W. I. Allen, deputy administrator.

"Unfortunately, we have no minimum rate commission in our state and the best evidence we can present is that the Massachusetts minimum rate commission in 1932 set the minimum scale at $13.50," Barry said.

An attempt by B. E. Gordon of Boston, representing the Massachusetts knitting mills, to submit a plan for a surplus distributing corporation for the cotton industry was halted by Deputy Administrator Allen's insistence on confining remarks to the code.

"The basic law of supply and demand can't be eliminated by legislation," he said, noting there was no assurance that an arbitrary schedule of hours would absorb idle labor.

The code calls for minimum compensation of $11 a week for unskilled workers in the North and $10 in the South, with hours limited to 40 weekly. Machine shifts would be limited to two of 40 hours each. Organized labor has insisted on at least a $14 minimum wage and wants hours held to 32 a week or less.

Shotgun Guard Out for "Peeping Toms"

Lawrence, June 29—A guard of six policemen, each armed with a sawed-off shotgun, has been ordered into the municipal home on the grounds of Lawrence General Hospital as the result of the appearance of three "Peeping Toms," one of whom, nurses say, was masked, who appeared at the windows of the nurses' home early today.

Early today, however, the entire home which houses nearly 20 nurses was thrown into excitement when three strangers appeared at separate windows at the same time.

TITLE CONTENDER ON AIR

Challenge to Champ by Californian

By N. F. T.

Our native New England son named Sharkey, he who is known as first-place fist flinger in the whole recovering world, should have a radio set in his dressing room tonight. He would hear what Mama Baer's husky cub Max has in mind to say about him. Carnera could no doubt catch a good-sized cauliflower earful, too. However, both Primo and Jack will probably be pre-occupied aplenty with an immediate problem concerning just how to hit one another most effectively on the chin and other perchance unprotected sections of their finely fashioned bodies.

* * *

Therefore the business of broadcasting, much milder form of modern exhibitionism that it is, remains temporarily in the capable, when clenched, hands of Mr. Baer. Since looming so large on the heavyweight title horizon lately, Max Baer has become carefully catalogued with the Pacific slope climate and screen star studded community of Hollywood. He's just another big institution for California to crow about. By jingo, those Golden Gate State boosters certainly can boast, even if they are justified.

* * *

Rudy Vallee, microphone idol of the effete East, will introduce young Mr. Baer along there between 8 and 9 o'clock, during that well known weekly hour heard from coast to coast and hereabouts over WEEI waves. In addition, Rudy presents Dr. Rockwell, celebrated footlight comic, James Kirkwood, the screen actor, likewise has a place set aside on the variety program, as do Ray Perkins and Barbara "Snoopie" Blair, announced as the newest network song and story team to be formed.

* * *

HOW IT HAPPENED?

Getting back briefly to the bout, loudspeaker patrons are promised a bird's-eye word picture of it all —aired afterward. Graham McNamee plays the part of the bird. Such is the NBC plan. Ted Husing, the CBS sport slant chap, hands out his version of what he views, also contributed when the contest has concluded. These should be listened for between 10:15 and 11:30 through WEEI and WAAB channels.

* * *

It was Phil Cook who remarked (WBZ) the other night, as far as round-by-round radio reports of important prize fights go, things seem to have developed into equally hard tought PRICE fights. Somehow or other, nobody wins.

* * *

POOR PLACE

Those Brookline summer Symphony concerts get under way by wireless tonight (WNAC), coming across from 8 until 9 o'clock in opposition to the Rudy Vallee hour dial doings. A tough time spot to be in, no mistake.

* * *

There may be a Hub station hookup through some station for Benny Rubin, the Hebrew dialect comic, in town from Hollywood. Benny will be the main attraction tomorrow evening during "Benny Rubin Night" festivities at his brother Joe's, out on Highway number 1 there, near Norwood.

Feuss of Phillips Andover Academy.

LYNN WOMAN IN DEATH QUIZ

Local investigation of the murder of two women in Miami, Fla., which has centered in the office of Dist. Atty. Bishop, of Middlesex county, took a surprise turn this afternoon, when State's Attorney Vernon Hawthorne and Detective John B. Rowlands, of Dade county, Fla., went to Lynn, to interrogate a woman there.

Her identity was not revealed and aid of Lynn police officials not requested. They had informed Florida officials of her address and had assured her she was in town.

Hawthorne and Rowlands said they were practically ready to eliminate James R. Humphreys, of Newton and Andover, former part owner of the hotel where the two women spent a vacation and were last seen alive, from all connection with their investigation. Humphries was questioned yesterday, and today Madeline Grover, of Revere, his sister-in-law, was interrogated.

The Florida officials are investigating the murder of Mrs. Meyer Shapero, a wealthy Woodstock, Vt., widow, and her sister, Miss Lillian Howard, whose bodies were found floating in Dumfounding Bay, near Miami, June 1.

KEEP COOL EVEN AT CLASSES

Students attending the session of the New England Institute of International Relations at Wellesley College have found a cool way to attend classes.

Lying on the grass in their bathing suits and cool and informal dresses has solved the problem for them. The intense heat of the past two days drove the students from the class rooms. The professors found themselves talking to empty chairs. They sought a solution and made their decision to adjourn the classes to a spot beneath the shade of the huge maples and elms of the campus.

The students have attended every class despite the heat. When the professor finishes his lectures they are all set for a swim in the cooling waters of Lake Waban.

Thief Took Auto Because of Rain

James Gallagher, 26, of Calumet st., Roxbury, was not an auto thief at heart, his attorney told Suffolk Superior Judge Beaudreau today. He only took a car because he was tired of looking for work and hated to walk in the rain.

The judge found Gallagher guilty on two counts of larceny and four counts of using an automobile without authority, and placed him on probation for a year.

With Gallagher appeared Edward F. Burns, 26, of Millside st., Roxbury, and John F. Ryan, 22, of Wigglesworth st., Roxbury. Burns was convicted of receiving two stolen cars and sentenced to the House of Correction for a year. Ryan was convicted of forging an insurance company's name to applications for license plates, and was placed on probation.

Waterbury, Conn., June 29 (INS)—Charlie Clare of Race Brook, medalist and former champion, flashed a brilliant comeback on the second nine today to go three up over Peter Petroske of Goodwin Park, the Meriden night watchman, at the halfway mark in the Connecticut state amateur golf championship finals.

NEW SWIM RACE FOR NOVICES

While some of the ablest girl swimmers in New England will compete in the annual races of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser on Saturday, July 29, at Columbus Park beach, South Boston, there will be plenty of opportunity for girls who have never won a prize at a swimming meet.

To encourage girls who have never won a prize the swimming editor has included in the program of events, a 100 meter freestyle for novices—meaning for any girl who has never been awarded a prize for swimming.

Officials of the Boston park department who control the beach where the American-Advertiser's big swim will be held are co-operating to make the meet an outstanding success. Chairman William P. Long of the park commission plans to be present in person as also do other leading officials of the department, all of whom are vitally interested in the entertainment of the public.

Everything is free in connection with the meet. There are no entry fees for contestants and no admission fee will be charged spectators. It's going to be a big day. You'd better plan now to take your family and friends there.

Mrs. Viola Hume of Malden was willing to forgive and forget an occasional beating by her husband, Clark, during their five years of married life, but when in October, 1932, he hurled her across the living room, she left him. In Middlesex probate court today she was granted a divorce.

Mrs. Ethel Ramsden of Auburndale was granted a divorce from Horace A. Ramsden for desertion.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. You will find Camels rich in flavor and delightfully mild.

A MATCHLESS BLEND

BILL TILDEN says: "Tournament play in tennis imposes a terrific strain upon the nervous system. Healthy nerves are essential if a player is going to be successful in maintaining his speed, endurance, and the psychology of victory. As a steady smoker, I find that cigarettes vary a lot in their effect upon the nerves. I have tried all the other popular brands, but for years I have smoked Camels. Because of their extraordinary mildness I know that I can smoke Camels as freely as I wish and still have healthy nerves."

o o o

Steady smokers turn to Camels because the costlier tobaccos in Camels never tire the taste—never get on the nerves. Your taste and your nerves will confirm this. Start smoking Camels today and prove it for yourself. It is more fun to know.

● WHEN THE WHOLE GALLERY is tense, excited...have a Camel, for the sake of your nerves... for the added pleasure of smoking Camel's finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos.

The Legacy

FROM THE Reverend Kenneth R. Waldron, of the very small town of North Girard, Pa., comes the story that I relate to you today. The good doctor writes that the story is an actual happening and I present it to you as such. Thus:

Just over the Virginia line from Pennsylvania a small town reared protestingly in a cup formed by the surrounding hills. It wasn't much of a place and I doubt very much that you'll find it on any map you choose to bring out.

But this little place epitomized peace, which is something you don't find on the map either. The dwellings were all white, and the only sign of life you would find on an early Spring morning was the whitish smoke that curled out of a dozen chimneys or so and crept up through the green trees in the sunlight.

You might hear a dog bark. But most likely you wouldn't, because strangers in that town were few and far between. Later in the day the kiddies—and there was always a fair-sized crop of them—could be seen playing in the quiet, dusty streets.

And among those children—some 20 years ago—you might have noticed the Warren kiddies. They stood out because they were a little better dressed than the others. There were five in all—but Jennie and Frank and Charles were too old, even then, to play in the streets.

But, Joe and Tommy—well, what would you expect from a lad of six and another of four? Their little, round faces were always caked with mud. And Joe, the elder, could always be counted upon to think up some devilment that would later be blamed upon little Tommy.

His father, incidentally, was much more important to him than the other three. To him mother was just a picture in the parlor. He never knew it; but this was the first thing that Tommy had been blamed for; his mother's death. The infant had just given his first gasp of life when his mother gave her last.

He was nearly six when the cuff links accident occurred. Vaguely he knew that his father was a lawyer—and even more vaguely he understood that his dad had achieved a certain renown in the big city to the north. It took dad quite some time to get to his office, but he did it every day.

He didn't know very much—but the night that dad came home with the cuff links stood sharp and clear in his memory. He never forgot it.

"A present," he said. "From a wealthy client of mine."

In the plush case were the cuff links. When it came Tommy's turn to look at them, his eyes opened wide. Two large diamonds glittered up from the case. They smoldered with a dull red and blue fire. Bordering each link was a thin band of onyx. And outside of that was gold.

Tommy liked those cuff links. They fascinated him, even though someone—some stranger—had given them to his father. But he said nothing, even when Joe grabbed them roughly from him to have another look.

No, he said nothing then—but on the following day, the child was missing. And it wasn't until the police of the neighboring city told Mr. Warren to call in person, that anyone knew where the boy was.

On the way home, Tommy told his dad why he had run away. He had emptied his bank that morning, and had found twelve pennies in it. Determinedly, he had walked the seven miles to town and entered the five-and-ten-cent store. And there, at the jewelry counter, he had bought his father a pair of cuff links with diamonds in the center.

Call it superstition, or call it what you will. But from that day on, the expensive cuff links never left the red plush box. Lawyer Warren could always be seen in court, or out of it, wearing the cheap, ugly cuff links that his youngest boy had bought for him.

Within a week, the gold had turned a sickly green and the "diamonds" had taken on a glassy dullness. But that made little difference to Tommy's father. He thought more of those links than of anything else he had.

For 19 years, these cheap links were justly celebrated. Lawyer Warren was never without them. Tommy said nothing, but the other children—and Joe especially—complained about their father wearing the valueless trinkets.

Once, Joe even went so far as to attempt to steal them. His father was angry; very angry. He told Joe that if he ever tried such a trick again, he'd put him out of the house. Lawyer Warren was funny that way . . .

Two years ago, Lawyer Warren passed from the picture. The cause I cannot give you But, when the five children—now all men and women—stood around the casket, Joe broke the silence by pointing to something.

"Look," he said to Jennie, "look at the cuff links. See them? Tommy has his nerve letting father be buried with those cheap things on him. He should know better."

He took Tommy aside. He told the youngster of the family that he should be ashamed of himself. And he brought out the diamond links in the red, plush case; the beautiful links that had been given to their father so many years before.

"I'm going to put these on him," said Joe to Tommy. "They're at least decent."

Tommy pleaded and begged, but to no avail. He said he knew what his father really wanted, but they pushed him aside. Joe changed the links. The old ones were tossed into a bureau drawer and the beautiful ones were carefully snapped onto the shirt cuffs of the dead man. It was as simple as that . . .

It was a week later that the five children sat in the parlor and listened to the reading of the will. A goodly share of the estate went to Tommy. And then—

"And to my son Joe, because of his interest in the will read: I bequeath with affection [illegible] the beautiful links in the red, plush case. . . .

New Buffet Lunch Service at Lenox

An innovation was introduced to Bostonians yesterday when L. C. Prior opened a new buffet luncheon service at the Palm Room of the Hotel Lenox, from noon until 2 p. m., with as many hot or cold dishes as one wishes, for 50 cents. The menu has an appetizing array of cocktails, soups, relishes, salads, hot and cold sea food, hot meat entrees, cold cuts, desserts, fruits and beverages. Mr. Prior brings this service to Boston for the first time in any hotel.

Girl Saved From Drowning in Hospital With Pneumonia

Miss Anita LeBrasseur, 13, of Winthrop st., Hyde Park, is under treatment at City Hospital today for pneumonia, believed to have been caused by the action of water on her lungs. She was rescued from drowning at Houghton's pond, Milton, last night.

The girl, while bathing at the pond, went beyond her depth and is believed to have swallowed considerable water before she was rescued. She was brought ashore by Life Guard Jeremiah Mackey of South Boston.

She was restored to consciousness by Mackey and later brought to her home. After being there about two hours she complained of pains in her chest and examination disclosed she was suffering from incipient stages of pneumonia.

1 tbsp. flour
½ cup sugar
Nutmeg
A little grated nutmeg
Pastry

Mix the ½ cup sugar and the 1 tbsp. flour, add the yolks of 3 eggs and beat well, add salt and nutmeg. Beat egg whites stiff and add to the yolk mixture, add one pint of milk last. Pour into a deep pie plate which you have previously lined with pastry. Bake at 425 F. for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 325 F. for 25 minutes or until done. Test with a silver knife. The addition of the flour, while not thickening the custard any to speak of prevents the custard from breaking or whening. The pie also presents a much smoother appearance when cut if it is properly baked.

Fluffy Ruffles

FLUFFY ruffles are smart again. The two evening gowns sketched—one worn by a youthful matron, the other by a worldly debutante—at a gala country club party, are typical of what all smart women are wearing this season for all but the most formal affairs. If you can wear young clothes and their young accessories, and manage to look like a dashing sophisticate and ingenue rolled into one—you're in high fashion now.

You see the younger girl, on the right, in a demure summer evening dress of all-white frosted organza. It closes high at the throat, there's a childish collar, and fluted ruffles everywhere, even covering the shoulders. The skirt is voluminous, marked by rows and rows of ruffles. Just like baby sister's best bib-and-tucker—a delightfully naive fantasy!

Frilly organdie bags and gloves, ruffled all over, are the right accessories to carry with both these gowns. For further sophistication, add a tiny contrasting pill-box organdy evening cap, or one of the new mysterious evening veils that spell heaps and heaps of allure.

NARCOTIC DRIVE IS ENDORSED

Los Angeles, June 29 (US)—Vigorous suport of the unifropm state narcotic act, which is advocated by Hearst newspapers, was voiced in a resolution unanimously adopted yesterday by the thousands of delegates to the Kiwanis international convention.

The resolution, introduced by former State Senator Sanborn Young, of Los Gatos, Cal., and a member fo the Kiwanis Club of that city, urges immediate action by the organization's national public affairs committee in launching a country-wide educational program sponsoring the act.

The resolution said in part that: "We are aware of the ineffectiveness of many state narcotic laws. Therefore be it resolved that Kiwanis International endorses the educational campaign inaugurated by the United States commissioner of narcotics and the passage of the uniform state narcotic act."

Deploring what they termed the "present tendency to cripple the schools by withdrawing adequate financial support," the delegates adopted another resolution emphasizing importance of maintaining proper educational facilities. The resolution was submitted by Charles A. Fisher, Ann Arbor, Mich.

PATTERN NO. 478

KNAVE'S GIRL By Joan Clayton

Patricia Gets Into Bridge Game With Strangers at Hotel and Is $30 Winner

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Young and lovely Patricia Warren employs the card skill she inherited from her late father to help support her stepmother and stepsisters by playing at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Pat receives 50 cents an hour. She declines the offer of Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, to make her his secretary and partner when, after taking her home, he tries to make love to her. Her nagging stepmother is furious at Pat's refusal. Later, at Mrs. Sycott's home, Patricia meets Clark Tracy, her ideal, only to learn he is engaged to the socially prominent Martha March. Pat is heartbroken. New Year's Eve Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, insists that Pat accompany him to a dance. They stop at a rival racketeer's place, where Bill demands settlement for infringement on his territory. He is shot and Pat flees in terror. Arriving home, Pat is put out by her stepmother, who says the police are looking for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

PATRICIA told Leda why her stepmother put her out. Leda linked her hands beneath her haggard, fascinating face. After a night of revelry lines showed there cruelly. In the firelight her crown of platinum hair seemed harsh and artificial. But Leda herself was real. At the end of the lagging recital she said quickly and sincerely:

"Will you stay with me awhile?"

"That's what I hoped to do," Patricia admitted in an embarrassed, troubled way. "But now I see it is wrong, Leda."

"Because of Phil, you mean?"

"He hates me."

"Forget Phil. I'll take care of him. You must stay!" Looking into the other's somber face, Leda added gently, "You'll have to, my dear. You've no other choice."

"I'll stay then," said Patricia, low. "I don't know when I can ever pay you back."

"Forget that too. Would you like to hear what I advise? I don't suppose you would, but I'm going to tell you anyhow. There's only one thing you do well, Patricia, and the only people who are getting jobs these days are specialists."

"I know what you're going to say," Patricia broke in childishly. "Please don't say it."

"Call up Julian Haverholt," finished the other inflexibly.

"I don't see how you can advise that," said Patricia, hurt. "Particularly after what Phil has said about people who play cards."

"Phil and I are two different people. We disagree there. Call up Julian Haverholt, Patricia. You're old enough, smart enough, pretty enough to take care of yourself. You'd have him wound around your little finger inside two days. You could make him pull you to the top; you could be famous in a year. Contract bridge is the swellest racket going these days. Go ahead, Pat."

NO JOB IN SIGHT

"No."

"You'll never find a job otherwise," predicted the older girl.

After two weeks of fruitless hunting Patricia, herself sometimes wavered. Every morning she went out in borrowed clothes; every night she returned on borrowed carfare. She lived from day to day. Some day she would get a job; she must get a job. The situation now was impossible.

Phil was a constant visitor to the apartment. He and Patricia tore at each other's nerves, were nasty on speaking terms. The girl was too young to make allowances for the man; he was too intolerant to make allowances for her. Endless by Leda played peacemaker. But sometimes Patricia, wretched at the impasse of her own affairs, wondered if her friend did not tire of the role. Two people, both jobless. Phil had lost his position as a telephone lineman months before, dependent upon the strength and generosity of another—it was not right. Patricia knew that. But she was helpless.

Then came the afternoon she dropped into the Hotel Beaucarme. She entered very casual as she strolled through the lobby and turned off into a pleasant chintz lined room where several dozen people were playing cards. She was not casual. She had come deliberately. She had come to gamble.

She paused at the desk where an attendant was seated. Her heart was beating fast. Her hands were icy. When the attendant looked up, she said, "I'd like to play a game of contract."

"For stakes?"

"Yes," she pleased.

"Is a cent a point all right?"

"Yes."

As a cent a point a player of average abilities might lose ten dollars on a single hand. Patricia had exactly five dollars borrowed that morning from Leda. But she did not intend to lose. She paid the one dollar fee and watched the attendant cross the room to a table where three men sat.

STARTS PLAY

To the nervous, anxious girl it was apparent that two of the men, obviously the attendant, were arguing with the third. She guessed why. The fat, short man, his round face red now with annoyance, did not wish to risk an unknown as a partner. Eventually though he shrugged and gave up. A moment later the attendant beckoned and Patricia threaded her way past the concentrated players toward that table. She acknowledged introductions from Gillis and Arthur Ray, her opponents, and to Wally Edge, her partner. The latter was still sulking.

"What system do you plan?" he asked shortly.

"Any system," Patricia informed him coolly.

Edge looked at her with sharpened interest, unsure whether she was posing or telling the simple truth. At the end of the first rubber he was sure. His abrupt respect was almost funny. Patricia waved aside his lavish compliments and settled to the serious business of playing bridge.

She won just as she had thought she would win. She had not thought she would win $35. The sum seemed stupendous. In a haze of incredulous joy she heard Edge urge her to return the next day, heard herself promise. She sped from the hotel. She ran all the way to Leda's, burst in breathless, so excited she could scarcely speak. Leda and Phil were at the table.

STUNNED SILENCE

"We waited dinner," Leda began in a tone of mild reproach. "Where have you been?"

"I've been winning at bridge," cried Patricia joyfully. "Look, look will you, at what I've won."

She displayed a handful of bills. Leda sprang from the table, nearly as excited as her friend.

"You can take your money and get out," he shouted at Patricia. "I won't have my fiancee living with a common gambler!"

There was a moment of stunned silence. Patricia's face was white. Her hands, still full of bills, dropped. Even Phil felt that he had gone too far. He sat down heavily.

"Phil's crazy,' Leda declared at length. Turning on him, she said with an undercurrent of sharpness, "Tell Patricia you're sorry."

"Oh, all right," he capitulated ungraciously. "I'm sorry, but you'll never convince me that gambling is honest."

If Leda had been content to accept the grudging apology the air might have cleared. Leda wasn't. She added tartly, "You're so narrow minded, Phil, I wonder you weren't born on the Ark."

"Well," said the man on an explosive breath, "do you think Patricia's done something cute. Do you really intend to back her up in this?"

"I don't need anybody's backing," Patricia interposed coldly. The stricken look had left her now. She continued steadily, "I know that I consider right and wrong. I don't interfere with your ideas, Phil. Why not allow me the same privilege?"

10 Words Business Just Can't Spell

New York, June 29 (INS)—Relatively simple words are misspelled oftener in business than the "hard" words contestants in spelling bees encounter, according to Adelaide B. Hakes, technical school supervisor.

Today she listed 10 words most frequently misspelled in business English. They are procedure, loss, benefited, accommodate, adviser, occurrence, supersede, all right, principal and affect.

VOICE OF BROADWAY -:- By Louis Sobol

I've never been too kind to the versatile lady of the orchids, universally known if not revered as Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Psychologists may be able to explain it—I can't—but ladies or gents who subject themselves to a plethora of marriages or romances inspire a titter in my blatantly unsentimental makeup, although if you were to pin me right down, I couldn't for the life of me point out why a person's marriages and romances aren't strictly his or her own affair with no buttons off my conservative weskit. At any rate, I've picked on poor helpless Peggy from time to time and instead of being greeted with the glowers and pouts and a thumb to the nose, I've been shamed by the girl's effusive sweetness and tender solicitude of my columnistic, moral and physical welfare. So, as I sat watching her at the Ha-Ha Club Monday night, studied her naively enthusiastic reaction to the buffoon routine of Jack White, Jerry Bergin and Lillian Fitzgerald, listened to her musical and unrestrained laugh, a softness invaded my inners—a great big softness of affection for the lady of the four ex-husbands and nineteen ex-lovers.

There is no one quite like our Peggy Joyce—she has no parallel in past or present history. I run over in my non-historical mind the love-ladies of the ages—the Cleopatras, the Messalinas, the Helens of Troy, the Catherines the Great, the DuBarrys, the Salomes, the Queens of Sheba, the Ninon d'Encloses, and the Pompadours right down the line—but who among them evidences the great democracy of Peggy, the camaraderie, the effervescence and the perpetual optimism. Who among them ever went slumming, as Peggy did once, and becoming annoyed at the lack of attention on the part of the bartender, remarked, "Do you know who I am? I am Peggy Hopkins Joyce, and when the bartender retorted, "Lady, you're below 14th st. now. Down here you're just Maggie Reilly"—who, I ask among those lovely ladies of the past, instead of perking a nose in the air in hauteur would have burst out giggling and repeated the story to her friends. And who among them, becoming somewhat perturbed with the indifferent attitude of an escort, as Peggy did, asked him in her snootiest manner to please drive her up to the side entrance of the hotel and when he answered, "Don't worry. We'll drive up to the front and I'll let you have the money to pay your rent so you won't have to sneak in," would have laughed and thought that was the cutest rebuke—as Peggy did—and tell her friends about it later.

Almost as if it had been created by an imaginative screen gag-writer was the little scene enacted in the lobby of a hotel on West 49th st. late Saturday night. Three sailors, dampy hilarious and swaying like Japanese lanterns on a loose line, spotted two bearded House of David baseball players. The beards disturbed the tars, evidently, for they went into a huddle from which they emerged shortly and the tallest of the three approached the ball players and bleeruped out a challenge. "Betcha c'n shwaller 'tree live g'fish—betcha c'n (hic) shwaller 'em alive." The House of David boys were skeptical. "Ten dollars says you can't," rasped one of them. The sailors almost simultaneously puckered up their lips and emitted what we so laughingly refer to as raspberries. They dug into their pockets and finally collected ten dollars in dimes, quarters and bills. Then one of them staggered out and about 15 minutes later returned with three goldfish. Where he got them I don't know—but in a can he had three goldfish. Whereupon, the tall one took them, one by one, and swallowed them! Right in front of some nine eye-witnesses, among them Ed Hurley. But they didn't collect the bet, for one of the House of David fellows insisted that he had swallowed only two live ones—the third, he persisted, had not been alive—the bet therefore was off.

By Betty Alden

STEPPING FROM THE GLARING SUNLIGHT into the shadowy coolness of the Cohasset Flower Show yesterday, made us appreciate more keenly than ever how much we should give thanks for green trees, ferns, still pools and laughing fountains . . . for purple iris and white canterbury bells, rambler roses and blue delphinium and all of the other blossoms which nature provides and which we call our garden . . .

It was a lovely exhibition . . . of especial interest were the bird feeding stations of various varieties . . . retreats for feathery friends on the beach, in the woods and glens; even a winter scene was most realistically carried out in bare branches, pine needles and "snow" outside a cabin window . . .

Mrs. William H. Brown

Mrs. Loring Q. White received first prize for her arrangement of turf and greenery, a thatched bird house in the shade of a white-blossomed dogwood tree . . . lovely beyond words.

In a sylvan bower St. Francis of Assissi blessed a still pool graced by a Jack-in-the-pulpit and a vivid Canada lily . . . real birds rested on the branches of a mulberry tree in full bloom . . . This was the inspiration of Mrs. Edwin P. Seaver, Jr., of New Bedford and Mrs. Robert W. Swift of Milton . . . received third prize.

Mrs. William H. Brown, guardian angel of the arrangements, with the assistance of Mrs. Lawrence Oliver, strolled about in the simulated garden in a cool green and white frock with white straw hat, pleased indeed with the results of this season's offerings . . .

Tea Served on the Lawn

HER FRIENDS, MRS. GEORGE M. CUSHING of Milton, and Mrs. A. E. Benson of Commonwealth ave., sat in the shade of a large umbrella on the lawn of the Cohasset Town Hall and enjoyed a tinkling glass of delicious iced tea with her later . . . Mrs. Cushing's daughter, Miss Ellen, recently announced her engagement to Francis Welch and the wedding bells will probably peal forth next spring . . . Mr. Welch is on his way over to Europe on a sloop to view the races at Cowes, England, the first week in August.

The attractive children of Mrs. Julian Leonard were devouring little sandwiches and frosted cakes and lemonade in the tea-garden and we glimpsed Mrs. Winthrop Slade, in charge of arrangements, looking very fit in a red, white and blue eyelet batiste, cool and summery. We caught a glimpse of Helen Leonard, daughter of Mrs. Slade, out at sea on a sailing boat, breezing along with the breeze . . . it was race day at Cohasset . . .

Strolling down to the yacht club where the blue of water and sky seemed to meet, we were greeted by the attractive Eleanor Drinkwater Pinkerton in a natty nautical costume of white dress and double-breasted blue blazer, her dark hair bound with a blue and white handkerchief . . . she and her brother, Albion Drinkwater, and pretty Helen Hunt, were carrying their duffle bags and sails down to the shore in haste to start in the races off shore . . .

* * *

Happy Hours on the Bay

TWO TOUSLED HEADS APPEARED over the gunwale of a slim, white craft . . . it was Alice Johnson of the tawny locks and her brother Howard, with Helen Leonard as crewmate . . . it certainly looked cool and inviting to see those children skim over the smooth, blue waters of the bay and we thought how nice it would be if every boy and girl could spend at least part of their summers at the seashore . . .

We drifted down the road for a brief call on Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, whose homey white cottage on a cliff overlooking the broad ocean is one of the most sightly locations on the whole South Shore . . . She greeted us cordially in a summery blue printed silk and invited us onto the broad verandah, replete with comfy chairs, hammocks and cushions, everything for summer comfort . . .

Mrs. French motored back with us to the flower show where we greeted Mrs. J. Franklin McElwain, presiding for a time over the tickets, lovely and serene in a beige boucle knit suit with matching felt stroller . . . on inquiring she told us that her attractive daughter, Mary, one of Boston's blue ribbon equestriennes, was spending most of the summer days sailing her boat . . . the popular sport of Cohasset colony.

Miss Cynthia Read, daughter of Mrs. Warren Kempton Read, was very handsome in a cherry linen suit with large black hat . . . her Japanese iris display took second prize, and she was very pleased. Dorothea Seaver, in a brown and white eyelet embroidered cotton, posed before her mother's exhibit for our camera, a sweet-looking girl, tall and dark.

* * *

Honeymooners on Way Home

MRS. HUGH BANCROFT arrived about tea time with daughter Jane . . . both wore the flowered prints of the mode . . . We hear the newlyweds, Hugh, Jr., and his bride, are en route home after their honeymoon and a little cottage in Cohasset is being put in order for them . . .

Mrs. Channing Cox gave a luncheon before the flower show . . . she attended later accompanied by some of her guests, Mrs. Charles Jenney and Mrs. Robert Burgess . . .

Mrs. Howard Sawyer was attractive in a beige knitted suit with white turban . . . there were many familiar faces at this very lovely affair which continues through today.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harold Crosby of Beacon Hill, are sailing tomorrow on the Lady Drake for their annual trip to South America.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Letter to a Lady

DEAR LADY VI: It was you who gave me Axel Munthe's "Story of San Michele." I remember how I met you on the avenue one bright afternoon a few years ago, and you rushed me into a bookshop, cried out for a copy of the book, and pressed it into my hands. "You will like it," you said. And I did. And though I have given you many books since then, none, I would say, could have been as appropriate as a return present as the one I am forwarding to you today.

It is "The Arches of the Years," by another physician, Halliday Sutherland, which the house of Morrow has just issued in this country. Already it has had a warm reception overseas. Critics have compared it to Munthe's volume. In a sense, there is a resemblance; but there is no imitation of formula, though there is the same passion for detail, the same straightforward method of description, and the same almost unbelievable events, narrated with frankness and great charm.

* * *

You will like the opening passages, which deal with the boy's life in Scotland. That first dramatic incident with the insane man —it will thrill you, lift you off your feet; but Sutherland makes it real and believable. Then he goes into quieter passages, telling of the Scottish superstitions in regard to pixies.

"There was Donald Grant's boy, aged eight," he tells us. "He found a cheese in the woods and brought it home. Take it back where you got it,' said his father. 'It's a fairy cheese.' The boy took the cheese away, but he hid it in an outhouse, where he ate it in secret. In the hayfield a week later he fell on the scythe, cut the main artery in his thigh and bled to death in a few minutes."

* * *

There were stern Calvinists in those days. The children were not allowed to walk on the roads on the Sabbath, except to go to the kirk. Once, when walking with his grand-uncle past a plantation, the boy saw a rabbit in a trap and went forward to kill it. "Stop!" cried the old man, "would ye desecrate the Lord's Day?" The cruelty of that came as a shock; and yet the old man, had broken his leg on the Sabbath, would probably have refused to have had a doctor until Monday.

There was something to admire about these old Calvinists. They believed in an appalling doctrine invented at the Reformation, namely, that millions of people are predestined to hell for the glory of God—irrespective of their conduct on earth. Unless you were one of the elect, and there was no means of knowing, you went to hell no matter whether your life on earth had been good or bad. In such a doctrine there was no incentive to good conduct or self-denial. Had the boy ever believed it, he would have taken as an exhortation the words of Luther: "Sin and believe." And yet these Calvinists lived good lives.

It was a faith, after all, that bred bigote, but not cowards. Their hymns were all in a minor key, and the growing children hated them. They caused them to feel miserable; and if they heard them now they would bring back unhappy memories.

* * *

There is a fine chapter on an old teacher, one David James Hamilton, under whom Sutherland studied at Aberdeen. It really amounts to a eulogy, and it is rich in anecdotes, full of Scottish humor. Afterwards, the boy was sent to Edinburgh, where he tells of the "chronic" pupils. There was one, for example, named Hunter. He was a quiet, middle-aged man with a beard. He had a wife and three children, who also went to school. Hunter's father was a man who, before he died, was determined that his son should earn his own living. To this end he made a will whereby his son was to have an allowance of five hundred pounds a year as long as he was a student at Edinburgh University. As soon as Hunter graduated, this allowance was to cease and the capital from which it came was to go to charities.

As soon as this iniquitous will was read, Hunter and his lawyers calculated that there was a sufficient number of classes at Edinburgh University to enable Hunter to remain a student for the rest of his life. Thus it was that every year he matriculated and took out one class, it might be in the Faculty of Medicine, Arts, Law, Science, Agriculture or Divinity.

In fact, thanks to his father's will, he became the ideal student. He realizes that there is always something to learn!

* * *

There are adventures on the Northern Seas, among rough sailors, and then the scene shifts to a clinic in a small village in Spain Deathbed scenes are here re-enacted. One man has been a gold-miner in South Africa. He knew he could only last a day longer. Sutherland gave him morphia to make him comfortable. Finally the patient roused himself and asked for a favor. "Will you give me a cigarette and a whiskey and soda?" he asked.

These were brought, but the cigarette, after one little puff, was discarded. An emaciated arm reached for the whiskey, and Sutherland helped him to get the glass to his lips. He sipped it and nodded, then took a gulp, glared around for a moment and was soon dead. The matron and nurse were distressed. They even shed a few tears that anyone should go out that way.

A human, fascinating book. I know you will enjoy it.

New Styles of the Fashionables

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON of Brookline is staying late at her beautiful home in Cottage st. She is looking smart in navy blue crepe, with a becoming hat matching her gown and a striking tiny white ermine cape that she wears on occasions when there is a cool breeze.

Have you noticed how attractive Miss Priscilla Saltonstall looks in her new Nile green polo coat with a sailor hat, also of green, banded in white.

Miss Caroline Day wears a smart rig of white crepe with brown and tan accessories. Her hat is tan, and a nifty brown coat creates the ensemble.

Miss Lucy Stone wears for formal occasions a turquoise crepe flowing in graceful lines and topped off with a brown horsehair hat that is a joy to the eye.

Mrs. Frederick Holsworth has closed her beautiful place in Brookline for a summer on the North Shore. She looked smart just before leaving town in a neat tailored black crepe frock, lavishly trimmed with white and white interlining, to her neat black sailor hat.

Miss Hester Lanning is creating quite a sensation at the Eastern Yacht Club. She is a blonde, one of the fresh and wholesome variety. She is wearing a bright purple knit sort of suit that is the envy of all eyes.

Mrs. J. Linfield Damon is occupying her new home at Peaches Point at Marblehead. Mrs. Damon looked well the other day in a black and white ensemble. Her daughter, Miss Priscilla Damon, who is spending the summer with her, wears a suit of white tweed with gaily-colored scarfs and matching handbag, chic and attractive.

Mrs. Walter Bucklin has closed her home in Cottage st. and gone to New London, N. H., for the summer. The Bucklins have a beautiful red brick farmhouse, old and rambling and full of unique charms, in the mountain fastnesses of New London. Mrs. Bucklin looks well in aquamarine silk.

EMBROIDERY AND PRINTS PROMINENT IN TROUSSEAU OF FORMER BARBARA HUTTON

Wealthy American Bride Has an Extensive Wardrobe Designed Especially for Occasion

By Margaret Matson

IF YOU COULD have all the clothes you wished—and of any variety or cost—what would you select? Here are a few of the things that went into the extensive trousseau of the former Miss Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, who has just become the Princess Alexis Mdivani.

She has been residing in Paris and most of her clothes have been designed especially for the occasion by Mme. Chanel, the Parisian couturier.

Daytime Frock

For one daytime frock, the Princess Mdivani selected a suit of black Chantunel embroidered lavishly in white thread and trimmed with white pique. The suit coat is body, hip length, and closes high at the throat with a jaunty pique bow, and opens out from there to disclose a pique vest. Her gloves and sailor hat are both of pique.

Another daytime costume is a gray afternoon frock made up almost entirely of strips of the material that have been knotted on the sleeves and across the front for decoration. The dress has a hat and full length coat to match. One very outstanding evening frock is of white organdy embroidered profusely in black—reversing the idea of the daytime suit. The frock is extremely simple with off-the-shoulder ruffles held in place with two brief shoulder straps.

With Ruffles

A third evening frock combines clear purple tulle with organdie of the same color. The frock again is exceedingly simple, trimmed only the unusual capelet of crisp, upstanding tucks of the organdie.

The waistlines of all the frocks mentioned are set just above the hipbone. The silhouettes are much as we have been accustomed to seeing them here. The lengths are slightly longer for the daytime costumes and just missing the floor for the evening frocks.

Frock Design, Sizes From 36 to 50

By MARIAN MARTIN

WE STYLED it for the matron and gave special attention to proportion and detail . . . hence a lovely afternoon frock that she'll be proud to wear, knowing that it "does things" to her figure. The graceful jabot cut in one with the yoke hides a full bust, the unbelted waistline is well placed and a snug hip yoke and pointed seaming keep the hips slender. Three-quarter puff sleeves are lovely on stout arms.

Pattern 9683 may be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards 39-inch fabric. Clear, diagrammed cutting and several instructions included with this pattern.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and style number and size of each pattern ordered.

Just off the press—the Marian Martin book of summer patterns, offering a wide assortment of advance styles to keep you and your youngsters cool, comfortable and appropriately dressed whether you are spending your summer in town, at the shore or in the country. This book will help you plan a stunning wardrobe of easy-to-make styles at a surprisingly low cost.

The Marry-Go Round; Daffy Season

By HELEN ROWLAND

THIS IS the daffy season, when a man and girl drive out into the country to enjoy the beauty of the moon and then forget to look at it; or go out "to look at the moon" — and never rest until they find a dark corner where they can't see it.

Helen Rowland

Usually, the reason why a man's alibi to a woman is so unconvincing, is because he didn't have time to think up a more awkward and fantastic one.

* * *

A girl's idea of making herself attractive, these days, seems to consist in lying out in the sun and turning a velvety back and a nice, white, kissable neck into something about as tempting as a lobster-shell or a tan leather shoe.

* * *

There will never be any real "equality" between the sexes, until a woman can go home from the office, dust off her shoes and slick down her hair, and be "all dressed up" for a party.

* * *

A man never has so many failings that his wife can't find some other woman's husband, who is so much worse that she can enjoy thinking of her as "that poor thing".

* * *

Somehow, a girl likes to think of a man as big and dominating and masterful, even if she has to hand him a club and beg him to strike her with it.

* * *

What a modern girl really puts into her hope-chest, in place of the good old cook-book, is not a can-opener, as the masculine wits would have you believe—it's a check-book and a cocktail-shaker.

Sound Sleep Is Habit Gained as Child

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

"HOLD ON to health" is a motto of the Camp Fire Girls. These girls are taught to respect and follow simple rules of health. Among these are regular hours of sleep, sleeping with the windows open, fresh air, sunshine, proper food and personal hygiene.

Dr. Copeland

No one will deny the value and importance of sleep. It is essential to proper growth and development. The ability to sleep well is a habit acquired in early childhood. Once acquired, it provides a foundation for good general health, steady nerves and the ability to combat future mental and physical strain.

"But how can I teach my child to sleep?" This is a question I am often asked.

Most mothers know that every growing child should have 12 hours of sleep during the night and one hour during the day. Yet it is often difficult to convince the child of this necessity.

Bear in mind that sleep is more or less of a habit. Like other habits, it is best established at an early age. It can only be acquired by persistent training. Neglect may lead to faulty sleeping habits.

I would advise first that you put your child to bed at the same time every day. Irregular hours lead to restless and fretful sleeping. Too frequently the child pleads and coaxes mother for permission to stay up late. This is a bad practice and should not be permitted.

Afternoon naps for the child should be encouraged and continued until the age of six. Draw the shades, but keep the windows wide open. Even though the child may not sleep, he will derive benefit from the rest and relaxation obtained during this rest period.

If you are a sufferer from insomnia, you can appreciate how trying is this affliction. You will agree with me, I am sure, that prevention is easier than cure. Most cases of chronic insomnia can be traced to improper training in childhood. You can protect your child from this annoying disturbance by early training.

"SOME FUN!"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Or should the title have been "Ah there"?

This is the brand new Summer girl—oh deathless words!—of 1933. And yet—where have we seen her before. HAVEN'T we seen her somewhere? "Oh tell me pretty maiden" are you not the gay young shade of a girl who pedaled down Fourteenth st. when shining-clean Denver, Col., was a lusty young town turning into a city? When hansom cabs trundled up Fifth ave., New York, and one felt rich riding in them as one never possibly can riding in a motor car?

It seems to me I saw you in my thumbed and loved GIBSON BOOK, where I first fell in love with "black and white."

No, she isn't a shade—but a rosey girl of this moment, and she's gone big-sleeved polka-dot and plaid blouse, belt, buckle, pancake sailer, maybe with daisies on it?—and bicycle And I think she's a cookie I think she's pretty, smart and picturesque and I think she's wise. Wise to turn to so simple a thing for her fun. Wise to slow up and look at the world around her. Wise to exercise her young body in a healthy way. Wise to go on picnics in her own foot power.

WATERPROOF MAKEUP

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE OF the things that bothers us "city gals" on the beach is the fact that instead of looking glowing and colorful from the fresh air and exercise, our complexions simply get washed off and we appear pale and haggard. At the end of the summer, after the outdoor life has had time to put roses in our cheeks, we have no trouble. But it's now at the beginning of the summer that we must supplement our natural color.

It's a great boon then to know that there are waterproof powders and rouge on the market that can be applied and trust can be trusted to stay on for a reasonable amount of time

The rouge as a cream rouge that may be used as a lipstick as well. Some girls, for economy's sake, rouge their lips first and lap what is left on the fingertips on the cheeks. Incidentally, it's an excellent way to take the pink off the fingertips at any time.

Dry the lips—for rouge will not hold to wet ones—and apply the rouge to the upper lip. Then close the lips so that the excess is printed upon the lower lip. With one finger, then rub the rouge into the lips smoothly, taking off the excess and keeping the edges neat.

For the cheeks, tap a little of the rouge over the area which you wish to color. Then gently blend it in, taking care it softens all the edges. You never see a natural complexion with the color in a patch. It works up from almost nothing and intensifies in the middle, and that is what you should attempt to imitate.

The waterproof powder may be used over the neck, back and arms as well as on the face. There is a lotion also, which protects the skin against sunburn, which gives a nice "mat" surface to the skin. Then one needs no extra powder ordinarily.

On the beach, the right makeup is the natural-looking one. It should intensify and supplement the coloring without seeming artificial

If you should wish the names of the powder and rouge mentioned please write Helen Follett, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

This column is constituted in the Boston Sunday Advertiser each week.

Home Hints

COCOANUT sprinkled over fruit cocktails or fruit desserts gives a very "cooling effect" for summer serving

TO AID in preventing diced fruit from going to the bottom of gelatin mold, chill the fruit and add it when the gelatin mixture has partly congealed.

IF A CHILD does not like helping with the dishes, the maternal housewife can receive more willing assistance by appealing to the sense of fairness by explaining that neither does she enjoy washing dishes, but that they must be done. By giving a child a pretty little apron and giving her a "play name" when assisting with household duties there will be more pleasure in these tasks and more of a spirit of acting a part.

What Kind of Girls Do Men Prefer?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

What kind of girls are most popular with boys? Do they like gay chatterboxes, or the more serious types? There are two sisters who live in our neighborhood, and they seem so restless. They go from place to place, but I never see them with any boys. As for me, I belong to the serious type and talk about books, plays and literature. I hate being petted. I think it is cheap. But I don't seem to make any more headway than the two restless girls who live near me.

MARY.

Dear Mary: You have probably noticed that fishermen use different bait for different kinds of fish. The same rule holds with boy friends. Some men like serious girls, and some like chatterboxes. Select your bait accordingly.

PLANS FOR WEDDING

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

I am a young widow and I am going to be married next month. Here is the question: Is it proper to have my stepfather as sponsor at my wedding? Many people say that it is not correct and some people say that it is, so I am counting to you. It is going to be a church wedding at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. T.

If you wish to have your stepfather present you in marriage, it is quite the proper thing for you to do. I judge from your letter that you and your stepfather are congenial and that you would like to have him give you in marriage

Serving Cocktails

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When eating a tomato juice cocktail at table, should one drink it or use a spoon?

2—Should they be served in cocktail glasses or in sherbets?

3—Would it be permissible to use sherbets if one does not own cocktail glasses, or would small water glasses be better? T.

1.—It is convenient to use a spoon for the first few mouthfuls of the tomato juice cocktail . . . then we can tell if we find the seasoning to our liking or if, for instance, we would like to add a bit more salt. Then we drink the rest of the cocktail. Or, if you prefer, you can drink it all, not bothering to use the spoon for the first sips.

2.—The best way to serve oyster cocktails and the like is in small glass containers embedded in ice.

CAMBRIDGE MAN IS HONORED BY ROTARIANS

THIS IS LIFE

Death Notice Builds Again Era of Childhood Magic Plays

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

MY EYE WAS CAUGHT by a little obituary item in a yesterday's newspaper, and at once—such is the power of memory once the appropriate stimulus presses the button—I was a small boy of 10, thrilling to the most exciting theatrical experience of my childhood. I might almost say, the most exciting experience of my childhood, for I was a boy whose excitements were books and plays rather than games and athletics.

I lived in the city in the days before the school system had organized sports so that even the most reluctant child has his proper share. The games that country children play by instinct I never knew. Mine were solitary and imaginative, the chief of them being a toy theater so old that Stevenson himself might have played with it, and with the very plays and scenery mentioned not only by Stevenson but by Dickens and Thackeray.

I did not go to the theater often, but how those occasional experiences whetted the imagination. My first was Palmer Cox's "The Brownies," a fascinating extravaganza of the Drury Lane style. But there were also Joe Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead," Primrose and West's Minstrels.

"Jack and Beanstalk" Piecemeal.

But none of them touched in my estimation the heights reached by "Jack and the Beanstalk," the libretto of which was written by that Bostonian who died the other day in New York at the age of 80, Middle-aged Bostonians who remember the Cadet theatricals will remember the name of Robert A. Barnet.

I suppose that the annual musical comedy of the First Corps of Cadets was about as successful an affair, during the later part of the 90's, as you could find anywhere. If my memory is good, the association of bank clerks also gave shows about that time—and both these efforts, I suspect, were the inspiration of the famous Tech Show of a generation ago.

I did not live in Boston, so I never saw a Cadet show given by the boys. They were so good that several of them were transferred at once to the New York stage with professional actors. That happened to "1492," the World Fair show, in which a plump and popular tenor became famous for his impersonation of Isabella, Daisy Queen of Spain. There was "Pocahontas," obviously inspired by the old burlesque extravaganzas of the same title. "Prince Pro-tem" was also well known, and "Tobasco."

"Jack and the Beanstalk" must have been produced by the Cadets in the winter of 1896 or thereabouts, since I saw it on tour in Worcester, in February, 1898, just a week before the Maine was blown up in Havana Harbor. And the piece must have run for a year or two after that.

I saw the piece in installments, the first two acts in Worcester, being torn away by my parents to catch a train for New York, then a long interim, in which I made many an attempt to write the unseen third act for myself, with original lyrics set to such tunes as were to be found in my school music books or in the popular songs of that simple day.

Whole Nursery Book on the Stage

The war came and went, my father's business was scuttled by what was called then a "trust," we moved to Boston, and it wasn't until a year and a half had passed that I saw the piece again, with the third act, down at the old Grand Opera House, near the corner of Washington and Dover sts., in those days a reasonably respectable house for touring melodramas and musical pieces.

It was a good show. Barnet's libretto and Sloan's music were excellent of their kind, far above the ordinary run of shows put on for and by amateurs. The music was of the Gaiety pattern, of course, of the 80's and 90's but tuneful and amusing. And Barnet's libretto was most ingenious, bringing together on the stage many of the well-known figures of the land of fancy. There were Old Mother Hubbard and Old King Cole, Sinbad the Sailor and Little Miss Muffet, the Princes Mary Quite Contrary, who had the prima donna role, a monstrous Giant at least 10 feet tall, the Old Woman who lived in a shoe, the Forty Thieves and their leader the Marquis of Carabas, and the Fairy Queen.

No, to be precise, the Dowager Fairy Queen, who, as played by Ross Snow, was a really original comic conceit. He played her as an elderly ballerina in tulle skirts and knobby pink legs. Her hair was bright peroxide, her face plastered with powder. She glittered with diamonds, her voice was a falsetto shriek, and when she went into a dance her feet stuttered. There was a Fairy Queen! It was nothing to her to appear, suddenly, playing the trombone, and march with it to the top of a tall step-ladder, from which she fell off, and marched away, never missing a note.

But I suppose, the real magic of the performance centered in what the londoners used to call the Principal Boy, Jack Hubbard himself, played by the loveliest and most graceful of all created beings, Madge Lessing—in pale blue silk tights. No bare legs on the stage then, gentlemen. Silk tights and tight basques that gave the hour-glass waist. The Black Crook and its goings-on was still a living memory in the early nineties.

When World of Magic Goes

I never saw Madge Lessing after that, though I looked for her every season. My impression is that she went to Germany and became a popular favorite there for many years. Didn't she try to come back, not so long ago, in a revival of "Erminie"? I think so. "Erminie" was her period—and mine. My earliest memory of music is the Lullaby, which must have still been a popular hit in my babyhood.

I wish I knew the names of the other players in that first production with Madge Lessing and Ross Snow. If there are any left, they would be veterans, indeed. There was something about the old-fashioned extravaganza, such as "The Brownies" or "Jack and the Beanstalk," or later "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," which had a flavor that later musical pieces seldom had. Perhaps it was that the characters were all associated with childhood memories and delights. Victor Herbert touched that same string a decade later when he wrote "Little Nemo in Slumberland." There were probably others, whose titles I have forgotten.

Those old shows hung together better. They had a story. They were not merely a succession of stunts and blackouts, like the revues of the past 10 or 15 years. There was a chance for characterization as in the Pixley and Luders shows, "The Prince of Pilsen," "Woodland," etc.

Do not let any ambitious shocstring producer take this as encouragement to go ahead to revive these old classics. That is something else again. Usually they fail sadly. The only theater where they can be a success is the theater of memory, particularly the memory of the time when you were a small boy or girl and it was a magic world.

OFFICER FIGHTS BURGLAR WITH HIS FISTS

Man Caught Looting Store Gashed as He Smashes Window

A man discovered looting a clothing store in Washington st., Roxbury, early today, engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle with a police officer, broke free and was recaptured after sustaining a severed artery in leaping through a plate glass window.

The alleged burglar gave his name to police as Alfred Tyler, 33, of Shawmut ave., Roxbury. He was taken to City Hospital where he was treated for a severed artery and deep lacerations of the left leg. He is under police guard at the hospital.

BROKE PLATE WINDOW

Police say Tyler admitted breaking a plate glass window in the clothing store to gain entry. He said he used a brick wrapped in paper.

The break was discovered by Patrolman William T. Dreham of the Roxbury Crossing Station, who discovered the broken window while patrolling his route. He also noticed a pile of clothing in front of the store.

He peered through the broken window an daw a man inside attempting to conceal himself. The officer entered the store through the broken window and came to grips with the burglar.

GASHES LEFT LEG

There was a struggle as the officer attempted to place the man under arrest and the latter finally broke free from the patrolman's grip. He fled to the broken window, but as he leaped out, gashed his left leg deeply on the jagged glass.

The officer quickly overtook him and arrested him in Wilams st. Police say he had removed 10 suits of clothing and 20 pairs of trousers when he was discovered.

Brewers Turn to Steel Kegs to Beat New Beer "Barrel Racket" Used in Boston

They're "unmasking" barrels out at the Haffenreffer brewery in Roxbury and they're finding where the name of Haffenreffer, burned into beer kegs, has been burned off again and substituted with another name. Now they're going to beat the barrel racket by using steel barrels. Miss Ann Rasmusen and James Moran are checking up.

Barrels being what they are in the beer business today, a new racket developed and the brewers, in their frantic game of "Barrel, barrel, who's got my barrel," have finally gone into court.

It's all because there are so few barrels, comparatively, and so many barrel desirers—also comparatively—that the supply is not sufficient to go around.

The new racket was detailed today to the Boston Evening American by Thomas F. Maguire, general manager of Haffenreffer & Co., Roxbury brewers who have obtained a temporary injunction in superior court against the F. J. Reinhard Co. of Waltham restraining it from buying up Haffenreffer barrels.

Maguire also revealed that, as a result of the barrel chasing, his company has been forced to go into the purchase of pitch-lined, steel barrels from concerns in the Middle West, in order to prevent the eradication of the Haffenreffer name from the beer containers. These are the first steel beer barrels to be used in Boston, but they cost $12 each for the full-size barrel, or $2 more than the wooden barrel.

As early as two weeks following the advent of 3.2 per cent beer, Maguire said, his concern began to miss barrels, and finally Burns detectives were called into the investigation.

HIGH PRICE FOR KEGS

The company agents and the detectives learned that trucking concerns and others holding legitimate wholesale distributors' licenses were calling on Haffenreffer retailers, buying up the Haffenreffer barrels, and sand-blasting and otherwise eradicating the burnt-in Haffenreffer name and then sending the barrels to breweries for which they are agents.

Other breweries than Haffenreffer have suffered from this practice, as well, the smart barrel collectors paying the retailers the $7 deposit they had put up on each quarter barrel and the $10 deposit on each half or whole barrel—and sometimes paying the retailers a premium in the eagerness to get the barrels to get their own brew moving.

Most of the barrels obtained in this way, Maguire said, have been sent to breweries in Connecticut, New York and New Jersey.

This has reverted against the good will of the Haffenreffer Co., according to Maguire, because sometimes the Haffenreffer name has been burnt into the head of the barrel so deeply that it could not be wholly eradicated.

DODGE STATE TAX

"I think that the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Commission," said Maguire, "through no fault of its own but because of lack of an appropriation for the employment of investigators, is to blame for this condition.

"Massachusetts loses thousands of dollars in revenue daily because there is nothing to prevent these wholesalers from sending the barrels out of the state, having them refilled and bringing them back to Massachusetts without reporting the sale of the contents, and thus avoiding the state tax of $1 a barrel.

"We have even discovered that bogus tax stamps have been placed on many of these barrels."

DUNBAR IS MADE INTERNATIONAL DIRECTOR

Approval Given World Language and Its Use in Schools

A Cambridge man today headed the list of the United States' representatives elected to Rotary's international directorate.

He is Earnest W. Dunbar. Other American directors, chosen from a slate of nine, are George C. Nager, Chicago; Arthur R. Mayhew, Uvalde, Texas; Will R. Manier, Nashville, Tenn., and Ed R. Johnson, Roanoke, Va.

Nominees for the directorate from Great Britain and Ireland, Canada and Newfoundland and five others representing other parts of the world were also elected. They had been nominated earlier in the week.

Previous to the sections, the fourth plenary session of the organization's international convention, sweltering in shirt sleeves in Mechanics Hall, acted on 40-odd resolutions.

Chief among these was a suggestion that Rotary further the establishment of a universal world language and work for its introduction in every school on the globe. An amendment makes this resolution effective at the discretion of the directors.

Acting on another resolution, Rotary cabled the London economic conference in hopes for success of the parley.

In proposing the motion Will R. Manier, Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., chairman of the resolutions committee, declared that Rotary International had much in common with the world conference since one of the service club organization's object was the advancement of understanding, good will and international peace.

Another resolution adopted at today's session directed the vocational service committee of Rotary to give the widest possible publicity to "modern, progressive, ethical methods and standards in business and their application to the fellowship of nations as revealed by the present economic crisis."

Previous to this session, a large group met in a breakfast assembly at Hotel Statler to study the problem of relief and restoration to health, if possible, of crippled children all over the world.

The gathering considered ways and means to help the crippled child and the assemblage closed dramatically with the presentation by Dr. Elliott G. Brackett, of Boston, of a practical demonstration of the worth while nature of Rotary work for crippled children in this country and in other parts of the world.

Trade agreements for several industries will be discussed in anticipation of coming conferences at which national industrial codes will be written under the recovery act. Those holding meetings include manufacturers, financiers, distributors, carriers, business service men, physicians, publishers, retailers, public utilities men, lawyers and educators.

GRUDGE, SAYS STURTEVANT

Sen. William F. Shanahan's criticism of the alleged unfair manner in which Judge Malcolm Sturtevant conducts sessions in Somerville court was dismissed today by the accused judge with an intimation that the senator had a personal grudge.

"I have no comment to make on Sen. Shanahan's criticism of me," Judge Sturtevant said. "If one paid attention to all the blasts against him nowadays, he'd be busy all the time.

"I do not know the senator from Swampscott. Perhaps he knows me. Perhaps," and he paused with a "perhaps he's been in this court."

Sen. Shanahan's criticism of Judge Sturtevant was made yesterday on the Senate floor during a discussion on a bill to increase entry fees in Superior and Supreme courts from $3 to $5.

Shanahan arose to speak in favor of the bill and insisted that a fair trial can generally be had in the lower courts. In the midst of his speech he launched his sharp attack on Judge Sturtevant.

"He is the only district judge in the state before whom one cannot get either a fair trail or courteous treatment," Senator Shanahan shouted.

Blue Diamonds Still Croon; Not When Cash Is Counted

When the "Four Blue Diamonds 'go to town," they do it well, whether it is on the dance floor of a night club, harmonizing for the customers; appearing as witnesses in the Charles "King" Solomon murder trial, or figuring up how much money is owed them, for being witnesses.

The "Diamonds," four colored youths, were released from Charles st. jail, where they have been held as material witnesses in the Solomon murder case. They were there 77 days.

NO TRICKS MISSED

"Now 77 days at $2.50 a day amounts to $192.50. They received that amount from Clerk Wilham M. Prendible.

But four colored lads, Maurice Johnson, James Lewis, Robert Hamlet and Erol Dorsey, had been paid off, had balled themselves by putting up $100 in cash, and were on their way to greener pastures when Erol "thunk himself a thol."

"Say, sergeant," quoth Erol to Sergt. William McCarthy, who was accompanying them out of the Pemberton sq. courthouse, "how much money we got comin'?"

"Why," replied McCarthy, "you got it all—77 days at $2.50 a day. It adds up to $192.50."

"Yeah," replied Erol, as he scratched his head, "but I jest thunk a thot. "How come we don' get no money fo' thet Gran' Jury work?"

"Huh?" asked Sergt. McCarthy, mystified.

"Well, we wuz aroun thet Gran' jury room fo' three days, and aint nobody said nuttin about it yet," was the answer.

The other three Diamonds had stopped in their tracks to listen to this conversation, having visions of lots more coin of the realm being tossed in their laps. The four Diamonds and McCarthy were in the Scollay sq. subway, by that time.

"You're right," said McCarthy, "but I don't know. Let's go back and see."

So, the four Diamonds, still carrying their top coats, shirts, and other articles of clothing on their arms, and Sergt. McCarthy again climbed the hill to Clerk Prendible's office.

AH! TUNES AGAIN

All was explained, Prendible said the magic words, and $4.80 was added to the $192.50 each Diamond had in his pocket.

Grinning from ear to ear, the four harmonizers fled the courthouse to the lilting words of "The Story of the Tack," one of their favorite songs. (No one mentioned what connection that had, but they sang it anyway.)

Yes, when the "Four Blue Diamonds" "go to town" they waste no time.

WARNER BAXTER GIVEN ROLE OF DOCTOR

Jesse L. Lasky to Feature Him in "Grand Canary"; Cast Assembles in September

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 28.—These movie M. D.'s with the perfect bedside manner have had terrible competition. It's the M. D.'s with the laboratories and the research experiments who win the plaudits of the movie fans these days. Ronald Colman did it in "Arrowsmith," and now Warner Baxter will do it in "Grand Canary," a story by A. J. Cronin.

Baxter's emotional reaction in "42nd Street" gave him so many friends everyone will be watching to see him play the doctor who is exiled to the Canary Islands. It's a Jesse L. Lasky number and it goes into production in September.

Busy Days for Alan

Busy days, these for Alan Dinehart, what with marrying Mozelle Brittone and facing a breach of promise suit of a few hundred thousand or more. The bride groom had planned to take his bride to Honolulu, but no such luck. He is wanted at the Columbia studios for the heavy in "The Fury of the Jungle." The jungle is guess where—at Malibu. Louella Parsons no less. Sharing the honors with Mr. Dinehart will be a menacing fish, and you can just guess if it is this kind of an eerie tale Fay Wray will be in the front row. She is the gal that courts danger and how. Roy William Neil is directing, with Bobby North supervising.

'Sisters Under the Skin'

Judge O'Grady and the colonel's lady (Midvani) are sisters under the skin. Princess Mae Murray Midvani and Princess Mary McCormic Midvani have become bosom friends since their mutual grievance against the Midvani brothers took them into separate divorce courts. Maybe Princess Mae Murray has given Princess Mary McCormic good advice on the movies. Who knows? Princess McCormic Midvani sang for the first time before a motion picture microphone for "Paddy, the Next Best Thing." Janet Gaynor's picture. She sang "Macusha," and divorces many coms and divorces may go, but the McCormic voice remains unaffected, according to those who heard her warble.

He's a Young Cohan

Hurray, get the notebook and put down the name of Chick Chandler. He is one of the coming bets in Hollywood. Jerry Hoffman describes him as a "young George M. Cohan" and that is as apt a description as I have heard. He is going to be the movie lead in "Preferred List," a short for Radio, featuring Dorothy Lee with Leach Jason directing. This my children is just another J. P. Morgan yarn. I'll bet before the end of the year the woods will be full of them unless, of course, some other big public question comes up to rob this "Preferred List" of its place in the sun, to say nothing of J. P.

A Line Or Two:

The prize orchids, gardenias or dandelions of the week, take your choice, go to Chester Morris for mentioning Hymie Fink, the "on-the-job-photographer," as "Strike-Me-Pink." Douglas Montgomery is vacationing in Yosemite. Lois Moran, to whom young Montgomery was exceedingly attentive in New York, is also enjoying a vacation in the same place. Roland Young leaves Hollywood for Broadway this week. He will open in the play by his mother-in-law, Clare Kummer, in Philadelphia in October. Mr. Young didn't leave without a struggle, for there was a two movie jobs waiting for him which he couldn't accept. I'd get more excited over the news that George Raft will be co-featured with Claudette Colbert in "Snow the Wild Mare."

Snapshots of Hollywood:

JIMMIE McLARNIN and GROUCHO MARX in animated conversation in front of SARDI'S cafe, maybe GROUCHO was trying to induce McLARNIN to meet "CANVASBACK" COHEN: EDDIE BRANDSTATER, putting up the welcome home sign to PRISCILLA DEAN, who just returned from Kansas City; LORIEN BABCOCK, well-known writer on motion picture subjects, has joined the MARGARET ETTINGER publicity bureau; MARY BRIAN building a house in Toluca Lake district, opposite RICHARD ARLEN; what about JACK OAKIE? The joke of his being refused admittance into this district is still current, although he says he never tried to crash Lake Toluca. MRS. JACK WARNER helping her grandmother celebrate her birthday in San Francisco; she returns home tomorrow. RENEE and ETHEL DAVIES hostesses at a tea in honor of MARY PEACE and JACK LAWRENCE; JACK PEARL, BARON MUNCHAUSEN to you, here July 5; he goes into the picture called "The Big Liar"; GEORGE O'BRIEN and GEORGE STONE talking things over at Al Levy's tavern. RICHARD DIX with passports all ready to go for Europe; SONJA SCHULBERG back from a year in Paris, visiting her mother, MRS. ADOLPH SCHULBERG. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Globe Trotter on Screen

First pictures of the World Economic Conference, now being held in London, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's State. There are impressive views of the delegates from 66 countries seated in the great assembly hall of the Geological Museum.

Sun Bath

"I Cover the Waterfront in the name of her new picture, so Claudette Colbert may be looking over her district. Anyway, she will be the heroine in this film, on the Metropolitan's screen tomorrow. Incidentally, the bathing suit has its purpose in the surf; but in one sequence in the movie Miss Colbert discards it, and lo and behold, while swimming, a newspaper reporter (make-believe,) for cinema purposes, discovers her and gives her a greater shock than the cold water does.

FILM KEYNOTE TO PERFECTION

Story, Cast, Direction, Stellar With Enchanting Melodies

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

As refreshing as the good old east wind after a heat wave, is "Be Mine Tonight," which may be set down as a signpost to Hollywood for the perfect weaving of music and theme, and for ceaseless fluidity, resulting in a rare action picture. This "Universal Special," now at the Tremont, has all the elements of screen entertainment of the first rank; and because it is the best musical yet made in the English language, is worth the study of points of technical excellence.

Some of the Hollywood folk need advice. They need to be given the "lowdown" on audience reactions. The most frequently asked question of us is, What IS the matter with the movies? There are several producers who give their best to every picture; some just follow the sheep. It is true, as Variety and other publications are pointing out, that there is a flood of week-as-water products. For months the lack-lustre films have been working vast harm to the industry—weakening the audience response, killing the power of patronage, permitting "flesh" to stage its comeback, and even injuring materially the "draw" of superior films.

John Klepura

Nicholas Schenck long ago gave the remedy—there are no ills (said he) in the motion picture industry that good pictures cannot cure! Now for a diagnosis, based on the reviewing of all the new pictures for a good many seasons. Sound cause is the great and growing art of the American motion pictures about seven years ago. Through many years prior to that, the industry had built up itself and its output — action, action, action! Cameras had to tell the story.

Now Hollywood must. If it is to reclaim its lost ground in wanish public favor, backbone to the new voice. The audience, we may say, must have a part in the production of pictures. Its pleasures, its needs, its demands, must be met, if the industry is to pick up where its prosperity left off, and prosper vastly more.

Now the cure: Except in the case of made-over stage plays, where brilliance of line may merit peculiar treatment, camera action must come back into its own. Even in the case of footlight face refashioned, lens should be given the fullest play possible. In general, in our opinion, dialogue must be minimized, often cut until it merely supplants the old captions of the silents.

Why bring this up? We began by speaking of the great film at the Tremont. And that is just why we brought the matter up. For "Be Mine Tonight" is the perfect weaving of sound into the warp and woof cinematic. It flows like a stream, never slows down, and alike in comedy and romance, harmony and the unsurpassed beauties of its natural backgrounds, is an eyeful and an earful of exquisite musical film entertainment.

This is a picture that one may conscientiously and fulheartedly recommend. Be sure to see it while it is in town. You will love the singing and personality of John Klepura and the rest; him and some of the rest you will see in later Hollywood films. "Be Mine Tonight" is worth while.

Vaude-Films

Negro Talent in Best Stage Form Always Entertains

By HARRIS MORGAN

Talent to entertain is inborn in many Negroes. The race developed its amusement instinct generations ago, and down on the cotton plantations in ante-bellum days, the slaves fiddled and clogged, sang and played minstrels.

One of the livest of the Negro troupes is bookes to come into town for the July Fourth week. They are of the Harlem type, giving their show all that the term means. We have seen them in their home haunts; as a floor show, it is no better. They are Connie's Inn "Hot Chocolates," with a cast of forty, and due to give the Scollay its most notous program on many moons.

Making the rounds to find out how the theaters were going to celebrate the Fourth, we found Manager E. A. Vinson in a sepia study—brown study, the unreists put it. Dark brown, this time.

"No fireworks needed," said Vinson. "I am going to have the pyrotechnics in the best of all the hot-cha shows. My problem will be to put the cooling plant under full blast all week to keep down the heat these 'hot' Negro performers generate!"

Among the stars, as Vinson listed them to us, will be Aida Ward "blackbird" often seen at the Cotton Club as well as at Connie's Inn, Baron Lee and his band; Baby Cox, singer and strutter; Lucky Seven Trio; Pop-Lee Bates, caught on four stages by us the past year and always the hit of the bill; Joyner and Joyner, Gene & Perkins, Louis Armstrong; Avon Long, compared by some to George Dewey Washington; Kent Bros., singer, and the Inn girls, along with Connie himself.

Stage Who's Who

Al Trahan

Al Trahan, heading the new vaudeville program at RKO Keith's, Saturday, has a habit of keeping his audience in laughter. As a comedian, he is said to have a loose-leaf ledger of laughs alphabetically arranged something as follows: A Artistry; B-Burlesque; C-Comedy; D-Dancing, E-Entertainment; F-Foolishness, and so on. Trahan is regarded as an excellent pianist. He is unquestionably the world's funniest pianist.

SKILL, SPEED GIVE SHARKEY 8-5 EDGE ON PRIMO

MR. BOSTON

Sharkey Wants K. O. Conquest Tonight. Wants Baer Fray.

Champion to Pray, Not for Victory But for Health.

By JACK CONWAY

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

New York, June 29—Jack Sharkey says he will try his darndest to knock out Primo Carnera in their 15-round title battle tonight. He has a strong reason for wishing to score an impressive victory.

MR. BOSTON

"I have never been a puncher," said Sharkey as he waited for the weighing-in ceremonies, "but I was still able to sock hard enough to drop Primo in our last bout. If I tip him over tonight, I hope to keep him down.

"Before the Schmeling-Baer bout, I told you I wanted the tussle to end with a knockout. I didn't care which man won. Baer was the one to put the big smash over.

"I also said I was eager to step Carnera. I could see that if both of the major heavyweight matches ended with knockouts that the winners would draw a tremendous gate.

"I would like to meet Max Baer in September. If I stop Carnera, Baer and myself will draw $600,000. Some of the boys are talking about a million-dollar gate, but just now $600,000 is a lot of money for any fight to draw. Folks haven't got the kind of money they had a few years ago. I know former millionaires who are now chiseling by on small weekly incomes.

"I would like to stop Primo, then chill Baer. After that I would call it a day as far as the fight game goes. I have been boxing as a professional for over eight years. I had two or three years of amateur boxing before that. I have been up around the top since I licked Wills back in 1926. I have fought them all. Nobody can ever say Sharkey dodged a challenger."

* * *

Champ Anxious to Get Away from Training Grind

"I started training for Carnera at Orangeburg on May 20. Prior to that I did some light work in Boston. Training is the hardest thing about a fight. The frightful monotony of the thing gets on my nerves.

"I would like to step out of the fight game as an undefeated champion. I am not trying to do a Tunney, but one gets more kick out of figuring he defeated every challenger in sight and then quit rather than retiring after getting chilled.

"If I lick Carnera and Baer, there will not be a first class challenger in sight. There are not any good young fellows coming up. Ernie Schaaf was the best of the lot, and he had to meet with that tragic fate. Ernie was a magnificent physical specimen, and as fine a boy as ever drew the breath of life. I always felt he would some day step into my shoes. I had planned to pilot Ernie into the championship after I had quit. Fate decided otherwise.

"I shall miss Schaaf's presence tonight. He was always in my dressing room before a big scrap, and parked in a front row seat during the contest.

Schaaf's Death No Mental Hazard for Sharkey

"I suppose you're wondering what effect Schaaf's death will have on my boxing tonight, especially because Ernie died, following a contest with Carnera. I do not believe Carnera was in any way responsible for Schaaf's death. Primo just happened to be Ernie's opponent at the time things went wrong. It might have all occurred in a gym during a workout.

"After the weighing-in ceremonies I'm going to slip into church and say a few prayers. What am I going to pray for? That I win? No. There is not any reason why God should favor me any more than He should Carnera. Primo also will be praying today. I shall pray that I come through this bout without receiving any serious injury.

"I always go to church on the afternoon of a bout and pray for health. I never pray to win. It is not so important that I should win as it is that I not receive any serious injury. Boxing has its risks, and one is liable to be hurt when battling one of the best fighters in the world."

Experts Favor Sharkey to Retain Title

Sharkey will enter the ring weighed down by expert opinion. Most of the experts believe the champion will outscore Carnera and that the bout will go the full distance of 15 rounds.

The experts received a severe jolt in the Schmeling-Baer bout. Most of them named Schmeling to win, and Baer proved they were wrong with one savage right hand punch.

New York, June 29—I am ready to shoot the works in my first title defense bout against the gigantic Primo Carnera at the Garden Bowl in Long Island tonight. I came through six weeks of strenuous training without receiving any serious injury. Fit for the battle, I am confident of winning decisively.

I shall strive to score a knockout. I had Carnera down in the fourth round of our bout a year ago last October, and I feel that if I can nail him right tonight, Primo will stay down.

My mental attitude is different than when I fought Schmeling a year ago. Then I was getting only 10 per cent of the gate receipts, which figured to cover merely my training expenses. I was in a spot where the bout would not have meant anything to me if I had lost.

I could not afford to take reckless chances. I had to make sure of ending up with the decision and the championship.

It will be a different story tonight. I am receiving the major share of the receipts and, as a result, my financial future is assured. I would like to win by a knockout, and can afford to take the necessary chances to put the big smash over.

I would like to stop Carnera and then fight Max Baer. I saw the Californian stop Max Schmeling, and I feel that I have the boxing style to defeat him.

But I shall not cross the Baer bridge until I come to it. My job right now is to lick Carnera. This is a tremendous task in view of the size of the man and he is remarkably fast.

It stands to reason that a man as big as Carnera is very powerful. I would be unwise to try to match strength with Primo. I do not believe anybody can do that. I shall try to win by superior boxing, sharper punching and speed. I like to beat big fellows. My record proves that. I have never lost to a ring rival who scaled more than 200 pounds.

I shall do everything in my power to make it a hard, tough fight. Barring knockout of Schmeling helped the boxing game; now if I can stop Carnera, ring interest will boom even more.

New York, June 29—With Champion Jack Sharkey prove "a hollow shell," or will he explode this Vast Venetian "freak," as so many newspapermen like to call me? A few hours will tell.

Maybe that thought won't make me fight my best tonight! For I want to convince those boxing critics that they were wrong.

Because of my freakish size and the 'giant" ballyhoo, I was put on the spot of general public attention when I was still an awkward novice, just learning to box. I was matched, naturally, with build-up opponents.

The "fake" cries continued even when I won many bouts on their strict merits, until even now many experts and, I fear, a majority of fans still rate me as nothing more than a lucky palooka.

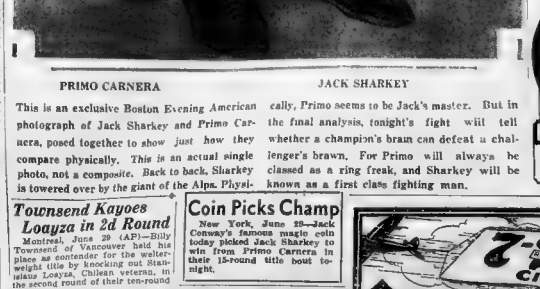
I must certainly knock out that impression, and I know it can be done in no more complete way than by beating Sharkey decisively tonight.

I am nervous, and so is Sharkey, too, you can bet. Everything hangs on tonight for me. In a career of less than five years I have pulled down about $650,000.

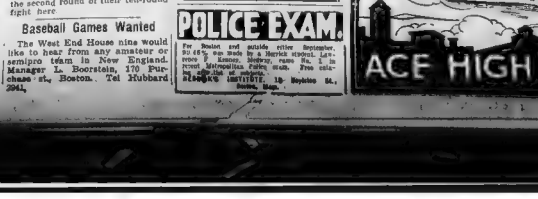
But bad business affairs "broke" me recently, and I had to go bankrupt, with only a home for my parents in Italy and many exciting experiences to show for all my efforts.

Therefore, I must start to "roll" again tonight—right into and over Sharkey to collect that championship. It is the short end of the purse this time, win or lose; but—with Max Baer, probably next September—it should be the champion's share.

Should Sharkey beat me—and that is not impossible—I know I will take it as I have other defeats. But thinking again of the newspaper experts—"I seem" must get the laugh on them this time. To do that I just must win that championship tonight!



PRIMO CARNERA



JACK SHARKEY

This is an exclusive Boston Evening American photograph of Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera, posed together to show just how they compare physically. This is an actual single photo, not a composite. Back to back, Sharkey is towered over by the giant of the Alps. Physically, Primo seems to be Jack's master. But in the final analysis, tonight's fight will tell whether a champion's brain can defeat a challenger's brawn. For Primo will always be classed as a ring freak, and Sharkey will be known as a first class fighting man.

RIVALS FIT FOR GARDEN BOWL BOUT TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY

New York, June 29—Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera are expected to furnish a bitter battle when they clash in a 15-round bout at the Garden Bowl in Long Island tonight under the direction of the New York Garden and the Milk Fund.

The speculative element is betting 8 to 5 that Sharkey will be successful in retaining his title as heavyweight champion of the world. There has been less money wagered on tonight's bout than on any title contest during the past 25 years. The boys who used to have the heavy sugar are broke. Instead of betting grand notes they are trying to cuff their way into the fight.

$250,000 GATE LIKELY

Sharkey's skill, speed and experience are the assets which are expected to enable him to cling on to his championship. The champion is 30 years of age and is not as good physically as he was five and six years ago. Sharkey has offset some of this natural physical letdown by improved generalship and better control of his emotions in the tight spots.

Jimmy Johnston, Garden matchmaker, said today that he looked for a crowd of 50,000 and a gate of $250,000. A 10 per cent price scale on tickets means the smallest money house since heavyweight championship bouts got into the big money.

The boxers and promoters are getting considerable out of the fuss that a dollar now buys a great deal more than it did back in the boom days of 1927 when Dempsey and Tunney drew $2,600,000 at Chicago.

Sharkey and Carnera are in the best possible condition for their skirmish tonight. It is seldom that two heavyweights come through six weeks of training without either getting marked up.

Carnera, like Sharkey, is confident he will win. Primo is relying upon his great bulk and tremendous strength to wear Sharkey down. Billy Duffy, Carnera's manager, told me today he believes the Italian giant will lick Sharkey during the last five rounds of the bout.

"Sharkey tired in his title bout with Schmeling," said Duffy. "If he tires against Carnera, he is gone. Primo has been trained for six weeks and will be as powerful as a lion when he answers the gong for the opening of the first round. Sharkey is bound to hit Primo plenty during the early stages of the contest, but Primo will keep going forward like a real Mt. Mountain.

"If Carnera wins the title tonight he won't fight Baer in September. He will return to Italy, and will not risk his title in this country until next June."

CAREY OUT AS GARDEN HEAD

William F. Carey will bow out as president of the New York Garden after tonight's show.

"I end up as president of the Garden tonight," Carey told me. "I shall remain on the board of directors and shall retain an active interest in its affairs, I am leaving for the Coast with Captain Foster of the New York fire department. I have not anything definite in my mind but expect to find enough to occupy my time."

Carey has been a splendid character in sports. His influence has helped elevate boxing and the other sports that have been sponsored by the New York Garden. Carey gave a sport much more than it gave to him.

"I am glad you have resigned from the Garden," Arthur Brisbane wrote to Carey.

MOE and JOE — Ride Your Dough with JOCKEY JOE

inspired Sharkey to jump camp last Saturday and race by automobile to Boston and back, hardly a beneficial performance for an athlete in training especially an athlete whose nerves are on a time fuse with the result that they are liable to pop off with and without provocation. However, there are authorities who insist that the man's behavior acted as an emotional safety valve and was therefore a for the best. The complete testimony on that won't be filed until some time after 10 tonight.

CARNERA A CIRCUS FREAK

As Jack Sharkey, the champion, the American and 205 pounds of mere man, waits the word that will send him in for fifteen rounds against Primo Carnera, the giant of an Italian, he must feel as David did just before he went out to meet Goliath. Much has been made of the fact that Carnera is the first Italian to fight for the heavyweight championship. But far more impressive, at least to Sharkey, is the fact that this is the first circus freak to become involved in this greatest of physical tests. Six feet six and a half inches in height and 265 pounds on the scales, he looks like something that might have climbed down out of a tree.

True, they've met before without any aftermath that was dire and disastrous. The last time, in fact, Sharkey won. This time who knows? I don't. Neither does Sharkey.

He's 11 to 10 in the betting today, but age has come upon him like a thief in the night and none knows better than Sharkey that, if his time hasn't come now, the grim reckoning is not far off. They say of course, that Carnera is only an ex-wrestler who should have been reasoned with before it was too late; that he cannot punch, but only smother and grapple and maul. But after the last time he fought, a man lay cold in death.

TOUCH OF THE MORBID

The victim, strangely, was Sharkey's pupil, Ernie Schaaf, and the champion was in his corner that night as part-time manager and second. Sharkey hasn't been in the ring since. Neither has Carnera. So there will be a touch of the morbid about tonight's drama, though its effect will hardly register on two men so absorbed in personal and more immediate problems.

These will take the form of the duel of the rapier versus the bludgeon. As to this, there are times when the thrust is to be preferred over the impact of the blow, but it must be deftly done or the result is disaster. Sharkey was very deft in the final six rounds the last time. But that was two years ago, and these have taken that certain something from Sharkey that represents the difference between the pinnacle and the inevitable descent.

Carnera, meanwhile, has improved immeasurably over the unschooled, unreasoning hulk they once toted about the countryside like an exhibit in a medicine show. But what he does tonight is negligible in comparison with what Sharkey is able to do. If he is within 80 per cent of his best, he can win and will. If he is less than that, I fear the worst.

PUSHER, NOT PUNCHER

For, while Carnera is generally known as a pusher, not a puncher, he is something of a defensive genius that only real speed can hope to defeat, and, on the other side, it seems only fair to state that a 265-pound push is no empty fluttering gesture.

Meantime, the ex-sailor with the strangely white eyes has been in town for the last two days, waiting, just waiting. The other man won't be in until this morning, it being his sensible notion that this fight cannot be fought two days before its time. But Sharkey somehow seeks campanionship now where once he was bitter, ironic and given to violent outbursts against anyone who might be unfortunate enough to confront his eye.

This time, he has turned almost amiable, but I can't say whether it is significant that his popularity has increased accordingly. All I can remember is another man who had to get old before they liked him. The other man was Dempsey, and the time of his greatest popularity was the day after his crushing defeat in Philadelphia.

But, as I say, the comparison may be without substance or merit, just as the customary "in the bag" legend this time is without logic or sense. Buy the fight? Why, most of those concerned couldn't even buy the bag

Salem Spa Hoboes Issue Challenge

The Salem Spa Hoboes would like to challenge any fast semipro team in the state for July 2, and 4, away. Manager Ernest Marcella, 54 Hancock st., Medford. Tel. Mystic 5616-R.

LUCY FOWLE IN NET UPSET

Lucy Fowle, 17-year-old Winchester High School girl, scored a distinct surprise today when she toppled the highly favored Joanna Palfrey, 6—3, 6—0, in the semi-finals of the older girls at the Bay State tennis tourney at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Miss Fowle kept the ball in zones where the Palfrey girl was helpless trying to hold on to the high topping shots. Joanna seemed to be lacking much of the aggressiveness that characterized her early playing in the tournament.

Eleanor Ciccone won the younger girls' title by defeating Catherine Everts in a hard match, 6—4, 6—2. The Ciccone girl played a hard and forceful game and was the master at every turn of the game. Miss Ciccone was the favorite to win the tilt.

The girls doubles advanced to the semi-final stage as Isabel Cunningham teamed up with Elizabeth Mills to win from Harriet Cole and Mary Louise Rice, 6—3, 8—10, 6—2.

MARTIN CHOICE OVER SECRET

Bull Martin is a big favorite to defeat and unmask the Black Secret tonight at the Arena in the feature of Steve McPherson's weekly wrestling wars. It will be three falls with no time limit, on a winner-take-all basis, with nothing barred

In the semifinal Rudy Laditzi will tangle with Leo Papianos. Tony Siano will face Gus Johnson in a standout supporting bout. Word of Sharkey's battle with Carnera will be given the fans between bouts.

Chicago Sportsmen Bid for Big Fight

Chicago, June 29 (INS)—A World's Fair fight between the winner of the Sharkey-Carnera bout in New York tonight and Max Baer at Soldiers Field in September was the aim of Promoter Joe Foley and a party of sportsmen, who left here this morning by airplane to attend the championship fight tonight

Bugs Baer Says Title Bout Is Bargain in Odd Sizes

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Sharkey's best punch is a right to the chin. That's neutralized by Primo's tall superstructure. The only way to make this fight even is to hold it on a flight of stone steps. Let Primo work his way up from the bottom.

If this is going to be a body slugging fight, that pleases the Rufftown fans. The first thing we did was to punch a man in the stomach to see what he had for supper.

If Sharkey wins his next opponent should be Bopper Dell. The Bopper is now using a totem pole for a sparring partner because there's so many chins on it. He can't miss.

Sharkey Keyed for 5, Primo for 50 Rounds

By HYPE IGOE

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 29—Jack Sharkey will have to be plenty Jack Sharkey to whip Primo Carnera!

Mind you, I am picking Jack to out-wit and out-fight Primo, but Sharkey must be BETTER than he was on the night he gave Max Schmeling that "Pea-porrige-hot" lesson in the same bowl, last year.

MUST HIT JACK WITH RIGHT

I won't put in with the idea that Carnera has fought himself to within one year of being the "greatest fighter that ever lived." He still lags, dilly dallies and hangs fire with his right-hand punches.

The only way to whip Sharkey, old dears, is to HIT him with a right. There are no left hookers around like Jack Dempsey, so I must harp on putting Mister Champion Sharkey in moth balls and cotton batting — with a RIGHT! Only way it can be done.

Sharkey won't be hurt by Primo's right. The left he has gauged. Sharkey will be hurt by pace, condition, youth and the yearn to WIN. Sharkey has th estruggle after eight years of struggling to get it. If Carnera comes on with that amazing condition and stamina, then Sharkey is in for it. Schmeling had knowledge and the punch but he was a marked man in there against Baer's youth and stamina. Baer has all of that. Carnera has it by the cart load.

If Carnera is to win the world's title, then his strength and astonishing stamina will do it. Sharkey's dickey legs won't pull him through. You've got to be an upstanding fighter to whip Carnera. Yes—you COULD do it in a punch but Sharkey isn't that kind of a hitter. Sharkey is easily discouraged, methinks. If things don't pan out the way he plans he can go into the damnest dugouts. He's unfathomable in that respect. He has tossed easy "touches" because he pouts under reverse English.

JACK CAN BE GREAT CHAMP

He can be a great champion tonight when he faces this giant for the benefit of the Milk Fund in the Madison Square Garden Bowl. He can be superb and supreme as he was the first time he met Primo. He thinks he knows Big Bootsie like a book. He is so certain that he can thump Primo into the "Uncle" stage that he boxed but three rounds on his last big day at Orangeburg. Candidly, I didn't like that and I was with Jack when he protested over only three rounds of boxing when 10 would have been scant exercise. Boxing is the thing for condition, yet I can and do pick the same bone with Bill Duffy who halted Primo after three rounds.

I wonder if these modern fellows ever heard of Jim Corbett's having fought 20 rounds with Gus Ruhlin the day before Jim fought Jim Jeffries those never-to-be-forgotten 23 rounds at Coney Island?

JACK KEYED FOR 5 ROUNDS

They slight things in this up-to-date age. I say Sharkey is keyed for five rounds in this coming fight. I warn him that Carnera is primed for 50! It is a battle of condition and sticktoitiveness. Carnera has met all the requirements. I'm fearful lest Sharkey is trading on his title

There is something else than the mere wearing of that gilded kelly. Once you have it on, you've got to defend it. Defense, successful defense, means preparedness. I wonder if Jack really is ready?

CupidShootsDarts at Primo's Purse

New York, June 29 (INS)—Emelia Tersini, British waitress who knocked out Primo Carnera with a right to the heart when Dan Cupid was the third man in the ring, bobbed up today to cause her "Big Boy" palpitations of the purse.

While Da Preem is attempting to ward off Jack Sharkey's blows tonight, Miss Tersini's American attorneys will be attempting to seize the Italian's share of the purse. Yesterday she caused the $14,616.03 judgment which she obtained against Carnera in English courts in a suit for breach of promise to be entered upon the records of the county clerk's office here.

HOPE TO DO IS FAVORITE AT ROCKINGHAM

Rockingham Park, June 29—King Horse thundered down the stretch again in convincing fashion as the Rockingham meeting continued with increasing success, both in attendance and in the pari-mutuel betting. And today the meet swings into its ninth day with another splendid offering of races.

Two stake races feature the card.

HOPE TO DO CHOICE

In the first big stake of the day, the $800 Derry Purse, Hope To Do comes out in an effort to repeat on this track, and judging from the field he is the favorite.

Yet the race isn't cut out for him, for both Flag Bearer and Sea Fox, the latter a son of Man-o'-War, are dangerous contenders.

Sea Fox ruled a choice the last time out, but could not catch the field after a bad start. The race is sure to be close and with any kind of a break at the barrier Sea Fox may spill the dope for he has number two position in the post positions.

BATTLE ON IN HANDICAP

Another great race is anticipated when Just Remember and Reservist meet in the $700 Nashua Handicap for maiden three-year-olds and up.

Just Remember which ran such a brilliant race against Marcasite here recently, is expected to win his first race and will rule a favorite when the horses go to the post. Reservist, as the chief contender, should press the choice all the way and many expect to see the latter take the purse.

52-1 Shot Wins

Our selections just missed copping on a 52-1 shot, which paid $105.10 for straight $2 ticket yesterday, as Juniority gave a handful of shortenders something real to cheer about. Juniority was picked to run second in the American selections.

Jockey George Haines booted home Quorum in the third race and then came back to win astride Justice Logan in the next race. Quorom was Haines' 20th victory of his career and the horse, by the way, was also another American "Box Special" choice.

Giant Lottery Plan on N. R. Races Wrecked

Concord, N. H., June 29 (AP)—The lid was clamped tight today on lottery schemes in connection with racing at Rockingham Park.

Ralph H. George, state racing commissioner, and Thornton Lorrimer, assistant attorney-general, announced they had moved to ban a huge lottery scheme on the Salem races.

McKECHNIE GUIDING BRAVES UP N. L. LADDER

TRIBE CAN GAIN .500 MARK IN REDS SERIES

By JOE CASHMAN

Our never-say-die Braves have today in the midst of their most spectacular surge ever under Bill McKechnie.

A week ago yesterday the Tribesmen took the field for a doubleheader with the Pirates staggering under three straight defeats and well down in seventh place. They're enjoying this off day in fifth place, only 1½ games out of fourth and but five games back of second, as a result of winning eight out of nine starts against the Pirates, Cubs and Cards, the three clubs directly above them.

They won four in a row last week and now own another four-game win string which they ought to lengthen at the expense of the seventh-place Cincinnati Reds, who arrive tomorrow for four games in three afternoons.

Three out of four victories over Donie Bush's crew, weakest of the West's representatives, would give the wielders a percentage of .500 for the first time since the opening week of the campaign and establish them as serious pennant contenders.

BRAVES MARCH GREAT

The fun at the Depot all started when Bill McKechnie shifted Pinky Whitney to second and placed Dick Gyselman in third. This lineup change in itself, however, has not been entirely responsible for the Tribal success. It has aided considerably, but the major portion of the credit must be divided equally between the pitching staff and fickle Lady Luck.

In chalking up eight victories, Brandt, Betts, Cantwell, Mangum and Frankhouse have allowed the opposition only 16 runs and but 34 hits, which means just two runs and less than seven safeties per game.

The Cardinals rated as the most likely pennant winners, not only failed to win a game in three starts, but were blanked in two of the contests, made but three runs in the other and collected only 18 hanties during their visit.

BRAVES TOSSERS FLASH

Lee Mangum shut them out with six hits on Tuesday. Fred Frankhouse applied a three-hit coat of whitewash as he won the nightcap of Wednesday's twin-bill, 3 to 0.

Still, without the breaks, the Tribe would have had its troubles in all three games.

And a word about the fans' support. There were close to 15,000 customers at the mid-week twin-bill. Such loyalty deserves the thrills the Braves are providing. The New York Giants, leading the league and with a population of several millions to draw from, think it remarkable when they attract 10,000 in a Sunday game.

Fish 'n' Game

By WIN BROOKS

"Lord, suffer me to catch a fish so large that, even I, when telling of it afterwards, will have no need to lie."... Old Angler's prayer.

Darkness fell like a slowly lowered curtain. Stars were platinum pin pricks in the velvet-lined bowl of sky. Slowly at first and steadily, then with noisy acceleration as it gathered strength, the tide began to ebb from Buttermilk Bay through the rip narrows under the highway and railroad bridges. Its swift-swirling eddies were whining kettle covers at the Buzzards Bay lip.

NIGHT FISHING A NOVELTY

But for the rest of us it was novelty, this night fishing. Big Laurie Washburn, Phil Hathaway and Ed Bryant in one boat; Brainard Kenning Myron and the writer in another.

The bait, four sandworms caught only by the heads on an O'Shaughnessy hand-forged hook below a Green spoon whipped out in the dark toward the broader bay mouth borne nearly on the tide crest. One felt rather than saw his rod tip and line and by instinct knew where his bait lay—60, 70, 100 feet below the boats.

An hour passed. We talked little. One had to speak loudly to be heard above the gurgling rush of tide. Myron told of the day Dr. Stratton hooked fast to a big one which took his 42-pound test Cutty hunk under the bridge arch and cut it clean on the abutment.

"He said he'd have to get after the engineer that built that bridge," chuckled Myron

There was a sudden watery crash as if a truck had dropped from bridge to rip.

"Stripers feeding," said Myron

"I'm fast" came a thud from the other boat

"Who's fast?"

LIGHT ROD STRAINED

Reel whined against star drag in the other boat. One heard in the darkness a big fish began to fight. Suddenly we remembered—Phil was using a light steel trout rod!

We put the flashlight on him. The little rod was bent double under the strain of a new run. The fish stopped finally. Five, ten, 15 minutes passed.

"Course you haven't," said Byron. "You got a big fish."

It was 15 minutes from strike to gaff, until Laurie with one motion gaffed the gamster off the reel and tossed him in a silver arc into the bottom of the boat.

"Ten pounds," said someone in another boat.

PIN MUST STAY IN CUP DURING ACE TOURNEY

Someone writes in with a question concerning the Boston Evening American's 1933 hole-in-one tournament which opens July 10 at the one-hole layout at Franklin Park.

He asks, "if the ball hits the pin will it count as being in? If not do you think the pin should be taken out." The complete answer is "no."

A rule is that the pin must stay in the cup at all times. The ball must stop in the cup to be counted as an ace.

July 10 is the starting date for the tourney. The entry blank is printed on this page. Fill it out and send it to the Golf Editor, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

There is no entrance fee. Each entrant, as well as the lucky one with 115 yards from the tee. If no one should make a hole-in-one those whose shots stop nearest the cup will get the prizes.

Little Touch of Class Gives Sharkey Edge

By BILL CORUM

New York, June 29 (U.S.)—A fellow who has made more modern pugilistic history than any other man save one, comes to scratch under the floodlights of the Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City this evening for perhaps the last time.

Born Josef Paul Cocoskey of Lithuanian parentage on the offside of the tracks at Binghampton, N. Y., on Oct. 6, 1902, he has fought through two enlistments in the U. S. Navy, two names and 10 years of professional fighting to become Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion of the world.

Whether or not he leaves the ring for good and all this evening as he will if Primo Carnera beats him, he will have left a mark second only to that of Jack Dempsey in the present day annals of professional boxing.

No other professional athlete of our times has been quite so cordially hated, nor yet quite so cordially liked.

JACK ALWAYS IN PICTURE

He has been up. He has been down. He has ridden the crest. He has plumbed the depths of defeat. He has been cheered and he has been booed, mostly the latter. But always he has been out there in the forefront of the picture where a champion belongs.

And if perchance you do not know why that has been, I'll tell you. He has that little touch of class that has made it impossible to ignore him. Like him or not, he is and has been for at least five years the most difficult figure in the fight picture to ignore.

For seven years now, or since he so soundly whipped Harry Wills at Ebbets Field, steady clients of this bureau have been writing letters, this in the night we are going in to have that ichier of yours knocked in your lap."

Okay. This may be one night. But it has been a long wait, and in the meantime if I hadn't scurried around and done the best I could my lap might have grown right lonesome for company.

Personally I do not think this will be the night, either because:

(1) Of that little touch of class.

(2) Of the fact that no fighter weighing 200 pounds or more ever has beaten Sharkey.

(3) Of the half million dollar gate with Max Baer, the bulk of which will be his if he can get past these ponderous Primos.

(4) Of his deep-seated conviction that he has Carnera's number.

(5) Of his natural pride in the championship of the world.

(6) His proved ability to win any fight necessary to keep him in the big money.

FIGHT ON LEVEL

My friends, he wants that money. What's sucker dough?

Furthermore I believe the fight will be a square contest in every respect, because.

(1) The toughest fight in the world to bag is a heavyweight title match. It is not the type to lend itself to that burlap business.

(2) Sharkey himself would have to be "in" and even if he were the type and in the mood to sell out, who is there in the fight racket these days with enough money to guarantee him what the champion ship is worth?

(3) If there had been any "business" I'd probably have heard rumbles of it from somebody with a license to know. Wise men may not talk but nobody enjoys talking quite as much as a "wise guy." Let 'em turn even a small trick and they can't wait to get somewhere to start boasting about it. Which, of course, is what makes 'em a "wise guy."

I repeat that I think the fight will be strictly on the Kokomo. Also that I think Sharkey will win it.

But then, of course, back in '88 I was wrong about a fight.

HANCOCK NINE GETS TWI TEST

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Orient Heights is all stirred up over tonight's duel between the strong St. Lazarus and John Hancock clubs. Both teams boast well known players. St. Lazarus is leading the Sunset League with 10 victories and only two defeats.

Billy Ennis has welded a strong John Hancock nine. Billy Vargus, former B. C. pitcher who worked with the Braves alternates on the mound with Ellis Kinney and Chick Hamilton. Art Norton of N. U. fame does the catching.

Among the stars wearing St. Lazarus silks are Frankie Rosetti, ex-New England Leaguer; Hank Chianni, Dean Academy; Dicky Maguire, Harvard Freshie; Zip Zu Santo, ex-Mercersburg captain, Joe Lavalon, St. Johns Prep and Pat Carello. Pat is the spark plug of St. Lazarus. He is batting .400 and in league games this season has belted out five homers.

Pals, White Sox War

One of Somerville's biggest games is scheduled for this evening when the Somerset Pals and the Somerville White Sox come to grips in a game which will decide for whether the Pals will be in the playoffs. If the Pals lose they will be out of it. Ken Grant and Smith probably will be the rival hurlers.

Fresh from breaking the winning streak of the galloping Roslindales the rejuvenated Medden Club will tackle the Hemingans at Jefferson Park tonight. It was something of a coincidence that the same night the Roslindales stubbed their toes on the Maddens the great C. M. A. C. outfit of Lowell should be taken into camp by the Newtons.

Harriet Smith, the only girl pitcher in captivity will try for Larry Noonan's All Stars against the Dorchester Giants in the South Boston Stadium on Sunday. As a warmup Harriet held the Raymond Club of Allston to four hits in four innings on Wednesday evening.

Diskin Fields 1.000

Eddie Diskin, Waltham's gloveless wonder, hasn't made an error this year and is hammering the horsehide off the ball. Eddie says a glove is a hindrance, not a help.

N. E. Business Gain Is Reviewed by Bank

"New England business has moved vigorously upward," reports The First National Bank of Boston. "Our index of industrial production for this section in May was the highest in twenty months.

The advance was participated in by practically all lines in this section. In no time in at least a decade have such sharp gains been recorded all along the line. All branches of the textile industry are unusually active. Mills producing wool goods are hard pressed to make delivery, and overtime operations are common. Manufacturers of men's wear are booked to capacity and are not accepting orders for future delivery because of the uncertainty of the price situation. Business in women's wear is the most active since the boom period of 1929.

In addition it owns and operates a zinc rolling mill and metal cap plant furnishing closures for glass containers to its various glass plants and to the trade in general. Glass sand mining properties are owned at Great Cacapon, W. Va. and M[illegible] Creek, Okla. Currently the company employs 4569.

Commodities' Rise Brings Perplexities

Perplexities are afforded the administration in its farm price adjustment plans because the weather and increasing consumption are accomplishing the rise in commodity prices which the Administration proposed to achieve by government regulation. If the course of prices for grains, cotton and other staples continue upward the administration's position is going to become even more difficult.

General Mills Is Aided by Flour Rise

Advancing prices for flour are helping General Mills, which took advantage of low prices for grains to lay in a sizable inventory, according to its latest balance sheet that for the year ended May 31, 1932. At the end of the fiscal period General Mills inventories totaled $12,897,305, up around 15 per cent from the end of the previous fiscal year. Flour is selling in the New York market for $5.55 a barrel, against $5.10 a week ago and $4.15 a year ago. The sensational upward movement in wheat prices foreshadows further increase in the prices of flour.

LONDON GIVING GUIDANCE TO SPECULATORS

By FRANK H. MELOON

It has become increasingly evident this week that London news is giving the most guidance to speculators. News from the London parley is expected to continue to be a main factor as long as the conference is in session. Adjournment or retirement to lengthy committee work would appear to be in line with the apparent American [illegible] of giving encouragement to [illegible] psychology during [illegible] months. Then the expected late Fall business activity will have risen to a position where sentiment would not be hurt much if any by an international currency pact.

The 5-cent glass of beer came ahead of the 5-cent auto parking pace, yet the latter also has hit Boston. The big sign "Parking All Day 5 Cents," is conspicuously placed for reading by New Haven and Boston & Albany commuters coming into the South Station. The nickel parking grounds are reached via Lehigh st., which runs off Albany st. near the Broadway bridge.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the reaction which set in during the last hour on Wednesday permits observers to obtain a little better line on sub-surface market developments. While it does not necessarily change ideas regarding imminence of a display stage, which would normally wind up the second intermediate leg in the bull market, it does look as though we would be able to join the festivities without the forebodings that would have accompanied a similar market policy earlier in the week.

Price Outlook

The outlook for higher prices is of course hedged by some conditions. It seems wise to be prepared for the unexpected and set limits which a temporary dip would not violate. The handiest measuring stick is the hourly compilations appearing on the Dow-Jones broadtape.

If all is well with the internal position of the market it is logical to expect the industrials to hold above 96.25 and the rails to resist attempts to drive them under 45.75. Contrary action would be unnerving as the next support levels are 92.75 and 43.25. They should not be reached.

Ticker Talk

On this dip fast players will be in their glory, as it is their kind of a move observers are anticipating on the upside . . . All others had better stay at home . . . The flashback might now carry to the 105-107 and 50-51 areas that we felt could not be reached, without intervening reaction, earlier this week.

A few of the favored issues are United Aircraft, Douglas, Stone & Webster, Warren Brothers and the listed gold stocks . . . Nor should the utilities be forgotten . . . As a group they are recovering earning power faster than any of the other principal share brackets.

REAL LEADERS SLUGGISH IN RISE

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University

New York, June 29—The market has been very mixed and nervous during the last two days and the real leading stocks have not done as well as the averages. A cautious observer is bound to feel that underneath things are not so strong as one would gather from the averages and the superficial news.

No matter where stocks may be headed eventually, I can see no reason in the recent performance for reversing the opinion that a good sized shake-out is called for. Only the wildest sort of speculation and strong-arm work can keep it going up much longer without a period of correction.

• • •

I think that we are just entering a period of adjustment to the actualities of the "new deal." The problems and difficulties of agricultural, industrial, railway, and financial control, are becoming apparent. So a period of appraisal and hesitation should be expected. This would be only natural.

• • •

Therefore, I continue to advise that only speculative trading commitments be entered into. In fact, the skilled and active trader may be able to make some good turns on the short side, if sales are made on bulges.

Many stocks may see still higher levels. But the recent action suggests better buying levels in a little while. Then I will like best the stocks in the building material, equipment, oil, and chemical groups.

• • •

More than that, there was a sizeable reaction at the end, which left the closing average price considerably nearer the low than higher for the day.

And throughout the day, the [illegible] time leaders, such as steel, can, [illegible] telephone, did nothing, while the liquor stocks, rayons, motors [illegible] whirled up.

Daily True Story -:- A Friend in Need

WHEN HELEN MITCHELL heard that "Pop" Barnes was due to lose his job as station agent of the B. & W. Railroad at Junction City, she asked her husband if he wouldn't do something to help him.

"I've known him a long time," she said. "And it would break his heart to lose that job even if the railroad is losing money."

So Tom Mitchell, son of a director of the railroad, interceded for "Pop" and the latter kept his job. He never knew that he owed it to Helen but she knew that she had finally been able to do something to repay the debt she owed him.

Not that "Pop" ever mentioned the debt. He never spoke of it. It was a secret between Helen and himself. But it was there.

It went back ten years, to the night when Helen, only 18, had come to the station carrying a suitcase and had waited outside. "Pop" found her there. He didn't know her then.

MORE AT EASE

Helen tried to smile as she answered. "Yes," she said. "I'm—I'm going to Chicago."

"Going to stay with friends there?" asked "Pop."

Helen said, "Well, not exactly. You see, I'm—I'm going to get married. I mean I'm going away to get married. And I guess I'm a little bit scared."

Other men might have asked, "Do your parents know about it?" But "Pop" didn't do that. He said, "Well, now, that's fine. Who's the lucky man? Do I know him?"

Helen seemed more at ease now. She said, "Maybe you've seen him. He's a traveling man. His name is Ralph Barry. He's—he's wonderful. I'm to meet him here and we'll get the 9:30 train. He said he thought it would be better if we met at the station and just sort of got on the train together."

For a moment "Pop" didn't say anything. He knew Ralph Barry. He had seen him often enough, coming and going from Junction City. Sometimes he had a woman with him and she wasn't always the same woman. And "Pop" had heard other traveling men talk.

But he didn't tell that to Helen. He had some of the wisdom that comes with age and he intuitively understood that infatuated, and blinded by promises, she wouldn't believe him.

So he said, "I've seen him a few times. Right handsome fellow, isn't he? But I tell you what. The 9:30 is late tonight. Just got a report on her. They're sending a special through ahead of her. Suppose I take you upstairs and let you wait in my office and when he shows up I'll tell him you're there."

Helen said, "That would be fine. I've been waiting out here because I didn't want anyone to see me. I didn't want anyone to know about it."

"Sure, I understand," said "Pop."

He took her into his office, gave her an old magazine to read and then closed the door. She didn't hear him lock it.

Alternately Helen read and listened. She heard a train draw in and then pull out again. That, she decided, must be the special. The clock on the wall said nine-thirty.

RETURNED "THANKS"

She listened for footsteps. Ralph ought to be coming at any moment, because he wouldn't know about the special and would be at the station before nine-thirty. The hands of the clock crept to nine-thirty-five and then nine-forty. Why didn't Ralph come? Then the door opened.

But only "Pop" Barnes came in.

Helen looked behind him, expecting to see Ralph appear. But he didn't. "Where's Ralph?" she asked.

"He's gone," answered "Pop." "He went on the nine-thirty. Before he went I had a little talk with him, and I don't think he'll be coming back this way again. I told him there were a few men in Junction City who would meet him if he did. There wasn't any special train. I just told you that to keep you quiet."

For a moment Helen didn't understand. Then, half crying, she told him what he had done, how he had ruined her life and driven away the only man she would ever love.

"Pop" tried to soothe her. "Now, now," he said. "Don't take on so. I couldn't stand by and see that happen. You'll get over it. Some day you'll thank me."

One day she did.

Silence Not Golden Now

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Looks like Moley's campaign of intelligent silence is finally winning a conference.

Like a kid with his nose pressed against a baker's window, we are admiring everything and saying nothing.

And it's a new kind of fiscal silence. It ain't golden.

So it just about washes up the conference. You can't play football if the boys refuse to come out of the huddle.

The home factory at Washington must feel pretty good now that our agents are doing better in the branch offices.

The nation's first drive-in movie theater, where patrons may use their cars for private boxes, has been opened in New Jersey.

The Plaza Theater is presenting a special show, for adults only, Friday night at 11:15; in fact the picture is of such nature that none under 18 will be admitted.

It deals with the silliness of modern boys and girls, their petting parties, road house folly, gin drinking. Dr. Karl H. Lee, famous lecturer, appears in person, explaining some important facts. "Flaming Passion" is a guaranteed attraction and anyone who thinks they have not seen the worst show of their lives can have a refund.

You are also warned not to think this show is falsely advertised. It is exactly as represented and those not able to stand a severe shock are requested not to attend this midnight show.

Dear Auntie B.—I understand you had a little trouble at the Century of Progress Exposition. Can we help you in any way?

ROMANCE OF THE BUSINESS WORLD

Only a few short months ago the copper interests faced a grave, immediate crisis. Price of copper had gone down, down, down, while surplus raw material piled up, up, up. Directors, summoned to meet and discuss the situation, sat silent, glum. Suddenly the door opened, and in rushed Hyvis G. Doakes, research engineer, and gave a triumphant whoop. "I've got it," he said. Then Doakes explained how restaurants use potato chips for a garnish, but that the valspar varnish used to toughen the potato chips is expensive and tedious to apply. "Make potato chips out of rustless copper!" said Doakes. And that, dear friends, marked the turning point back to prosperity.

Boston's Splendid Record

Our Sound Finances

The city of Boston has escaped the very grave financial embarrassments which have afflicted most of the large cities of the country the past few months.

This is the time of year when the municipalities must effect large borrowings of money with which to conduct their ordinary affairs until the payment of taxes begins in October.

The city of Boston has been able to arrange its borrowings. It was able to place some $7,300,000 the last few days with New York and Boston banks and other credit institutions. Some $7,000,000 more remains to be borrowed ere October 1, and this has been arranged.

In all, the city will have borrowed nearly $45,000,000 in anticipation of taxes since last October, and these loans have been negotiated for the most part without serious difficulty. The city was obliged to reduce its budget of expenses in order to secure some of these loans, but this the city was willing to do.

It should be a source of pleasure and of pride to the people of Boston to know that their city has weathered the financial storm in such magnificent condition.

Boston has never defaulted upon an obligation since it was incorporated as a city. It has been able to adhere to this record of financial integrity in a period of stress when many of the great cities of the country have been on the verge of bankruptcy. It has maintained this commendable record while expending almost $36,000,000 in three years for the charity relief of its unfortunate citizens.

Boston has every reason to be proud of this glorious record. Let us hear more about it. And let us have less of the carping criticism which is unjustified and which could only impair the glory which is Boston's.

Send Thebaud to Chicago

Visit at Fair Would Help Fishing Industry

The Thebaud is a magnificent craft. She will be admired for her sturdy beauty by the people of the West. She will typify to them the romance and the legend of the sea.

Let us be practical and face the facts. The Thebaud will advertise Massachusetts. She will represent the Massachusetts that has pioneered the trade marts of the world. She will be the emblem of the adventurous spirit of our sons and daughters.

Fishing is a great industry of our State. Our fishing people need help. The country as a whole must get some appreciation of the problem of the men who go down to the sea in ships and are so poorly requited for their risks and labor.

Who knows but that this trip of the Thebaud to Chicago more than anything else would impress upon the country the desirability of purchasing American products. Our fishing industry is damaged because our people thoughtlessly buy the products, including fish, of the low-wage, low-currency Nations. Seeing the Thebaud, their thoughts might become fastened to BUY AMERICAN.

Let's try it, anyway. At least, Massachusetts ought to have some exhibit there.

Our Utility Board

Mr. Atwill's Remarks

Henry C. Attwill said in a recent address that the Interstate Commerce Commission is "a joke and a bust." He described it as a form of federal bureaucracy which the American people ought to abolish.

Mr. Attwill is Chairman of the State Department of Public Utilities of Massachusetts and it might be interesting and revealing for Mr. Attwill to hear some of the things that some of the people say about HIS commission.

They say that the Department of Public Utilities in Massachusetts lost much of its power to the Interstate Commerce Commission because the Commissioners were too indolent to fully protect the rights of the State.

They say the Commissioners allowed too much water to be poured into some of the gas and electric companies, the railways and railroads.

They say the Commissioners did not force public utilities rates to be lowered in proportion to the reduced cost of living.

Now that Mr. Attwill has spoken his piece on the Interstate Commerce Commission it might be interesting to hear him discuss the charges levelled at his Commission, not in remote Washington, but here at home.

Thespians Flock Here

N. E. Becomes Summer Theatrical Center

How many of us realize that New England becomes the great theatrical center of the country during the Summer months?

Lakewood, near Skowhegan, in Maine, has now begun its thirty-third season. There the Summer theater idea was first made a reality.

The scene shifts from Broadway. Producers and actors arrive. The scripts of new plays are unfolded. Rehearsals are held daily and nightly. There the plays are manufactured by dint of hard work for presentation under the bright lights next Fall. When you hear that a great drama or scintillating comedy has captured Broadway, you can say to yourself with reasonable security, "There is a play that was fashioned in one of the Summer theaters of good old New England."

Since Lakewood, the Summer theaters have mushroomed in New England. Along Cape Cod, in the hills of Peterborough, N. H., at Sugar Hill in the White Mountains and in a score of other comfortable resorts you will come across them.

New England is the Summer playground of America. Bring your friends here to enjoy it with you this Summer.

Mrs. Richard Grozier

To Mr. Richard Grozier, editor and publisher of the Boston Post, we offer sympathy in the bereavement which has come to him. The memory of his charming and devoted wife and the belief that she has gone to the reward of eternal happiness will enable him to bear his ordeal bravely.

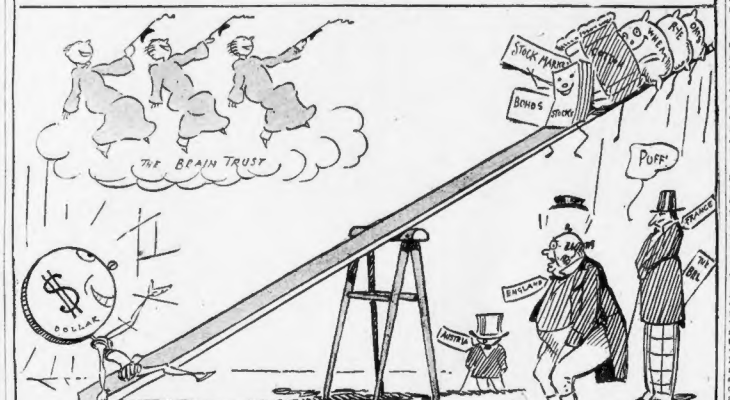
By T. E. Powers



O. O. McIntyre

New York Day by Day

Life on the Gallop

NEW YORK, June 29—Few express the mid-west notion of the hurrying New Yorker so neatly as Herbert Bayard Swope. Flushed, red-haired and twitchy, he seems eternally meeting life on the gallop. St. Louis born, he won fame as an international reporter and then as executive editor.

O. O. McIntyre

His career might be epitomized in an alliterative headline "Swope Swirls." Or conjugated: "Swope, sweep, swack." When he goes down a theater aisle it is with a last minute dash to a train. Yet with all this yeastiness no person can look more successfully brittle than Swope. So tense.

The springy gait is not only of body but mind. As city editor his decisions had the steely click of a roulette ball and as a citizen his drop-in at a soda fountain has the bluster of Edmund Kean. He is a lover of crowds, a dowser of doctrine and like all robust, a passionate devourer of red sirloin.

There's a legend he is the most prolific user of the telephone in town. Wherever he breezes, he first glances for the telephone and if none is about is unhappy. So unhappy, indeed he will not stay. Only while fishing does he relax this feverish pitch and they have to drag him away to it at times.

Likely the most temperamental dog extant is a Scotch terrier owned by the artist Howard Chandler Christy. A fierce battler if the canine exigencies demand, he is soft hearted when it comes to a personal snub. If his master makes a face at him, he slinks to some darkened corner and it takes an hour of coaxing to restore his joy in living. A whipping causes him to snarl defiance, but making a face sends him cowering.

Booth Tarkington once owned a French poodle that was the acme of gentleness. One day the novelist in removing a venerable banjo from a trunk, twanged it. The dog flew at him bristling in a bare-fanged rage. It required artful persuasion to calm him. So long as the pet lived no one could go near that banjo.

It was Christopher Morley who worried over mysteriously stenciled boxes he used to see on way to work, "I Gross Tom Cats." until he learned they were tomato catsup. There is similar perplexity in front of an art shop on Madison avenue now and then when slim cratings of something of other bear an abbreviated label: "Twist Nck Mrdrs." It sounds very sinister!

I have a distant relative who has always grabbed the tail-end of every fad. Just when she masters some new art to teach others there's a sudden shift in national consciousness. It was true in pyrography, then in tin-can and that until she opened a Tom Thumb golf course. About six months ago she wrote she was delving deeply into technocracy and I knew technocracy was ephemeral. Meredith Nicholson also had a kinsman who spent five years fashioning the perfect pants-guard and just when it was patented and ready for market bicycles went out.

Tales continue that Jimmy Durante has become impishly high-hat, difficult to handle and brusque with peasant pals of his saloon-singing days. As the stage's chiefest vulgarian, he had a swell break. Though most of his public would like to have seen him carry along his speakeasy partners, Clayton and Jackson, to the heights. In contrast to Mae West, another jovial commoner, who lands all her old friends of the tough-going days jobs in Hollywood. There's a gal!

Just when one is able to convince himself a little he is still a bouncing juvenile he runs into somebody he has not seen in 20 years. I did today and I wonder if he was assailed by the same idea. My thought of him was: "Old fellow, you have begun to curl!"

IT IS AN encouraging change from the past four years to read that the President of the United States is fogbound on the coast of Maine instead of on the shores of the Potomac.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Where Do They Go?

EVERY YEAR in June I Get Mad. So mad I yearn to go out and and a whale of a kick on the Status Quo's stupid, complacent shin. For this is graduation month. Thousands of splendid, eager youngsters leaving our High Schools and Colleges—

AND WHERE DO THEY GO FROM HERE?

What place have we made ready for all these would-be workers—these potential lawyers, doctors, school teachers, journalists, engineers?

Elsie Robinson

For years their parents have struggled to keep them in school; have skimped and sacrified, in many cases incurring debts which they will never be able to discharge that their children might have a better chance.

Nearly always that sacrifice was gladly made. But whether it was or not, the children HAD to go to school, education, in most of our states, being compulsory.

Nor were the parents the only ones who did double duty to see those youngsters through school. Every taxpayer also anted up. The whole American nation digs down into its pocket for education. Our graduates are our most expensive crop.

We should get brighter years ahead, more ease for weary Mother and Dad, more pride and joy and wider interests in each hardworked home.

We should get a busier and better nation. More progress in each community. More help for the sick and the weak and oppressed.

And the youngsters themselves should get their chance. A chance to work as soon as they leave the campus, before their eagerness goes stale. A chance to marry when love's at flood tide. A chance to fight in those noble crusades which, they have been told, await them on the human battle line. A chance to win their spurs and prove their mettle in every fine adventure.

Yes, we and the youngsters should get all this in return for our struggles, our sacrifices, our hard cash.

And we COULD get all this—if we set ourselves to it. We COULD make a system which would serve our children and, through them, all the race, just as surely as we have made a system which serves the big Railroad, Steel, Automobile, Banking and Oil Interests.

We could make a system which would give every one a chance instead of a favored few a chance—a system which would pay dividends to all of us instead of those favored few.

It wouldn't be hard. Not nearly as hard as the shell game we're running now. Just a matter of everybody getting together and refusing to be skinned any longer. Deciding to use our brains and backbones. Cleaning out the rats. Regulating working hours. Controlling production. Using the same sense and shrewdness to protect our own interests and make a profit for ourselves which we've used to protect any enrich the Big Fellows. And, by so doing, making a place for the youngsters as they come along.

Yes, it could be done. There's no good reason on earth, save our own laziness and stupidity, why it hasn't been done.

Nothing's holding us back. Here we are, with all the makings, staging the show we want and running it to suit ourselves. And how do we run it?

All that money spent—all those fond hopes fostered—a world in terrible need of their young confidence and enthusiasm—

Nowhere!

Exactly nowhere.

For we haven't prepared any place where they can go.

Wise Sayings

Foolish loves make foolish people.

Books without the knowledge of life are useless, for what should books teach but the art of living?

Strange History of Zion City, Now Bankrupt; Killarney Now Ireland's Own

By Edwin C. Hill

No respector of persons, the depression smites saints and sinners, the righteous as well as the wicked. We hear that Zion City, out by Chicago, and its latter-day prophet, Wilbur Glenn Voliva, have gone to the bankruptcy court, and that a once thriving and prosperous community of the anointed is on the financial rocks. Quite calmly, however, Wilbur Glenn Voliva announces that he will live to be 106 and that Zion will flourish once more despite the machinations of the ungodly.

Voliva, is the grand overseer of the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church of some five thousand souls, segregated in a mill town 75 miles from Chicago, and which bears the name of Zion City. There in Shiloh Temple, on Elijah ave., Wilbur Glenn Voliva proclaims his doctrines of faith and morals and runs the ten-million-dollar manufacturing business of the Disciples of Zion.

This plump, severe, thin-haired gentleman got the call to religion while he was fighting potato bugs on an Indiana farm. He preached the old fashioned religion of hell-fire for sinners before joining up more than 30 years ago with a white-bearded little Scotch prophet from Australia, the one and only John Alexander Dowie.

Dowie, calling himself "the first Apostle of the Lord" and the reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah, founded Zion City and ruled it with a heavy hand. Smoking, swearing, dancing, short skirts and the use of face powder or cosmetics was a sin to be severely punished. He was the most picturesque of all the prophets that have come storming along in the past three-quarters of a century, this undersized, pompous exhorter with a full snow-white beard that fell to his waist, brilliant blue eyes, rosy cheeks and great head crowned by snow -white hair which drifted to his shoulders. He was a picture worth looking at as he stood up in the pulpit to denounce the Devil and all his works and thunder below. On the lower lake is the castle of Ross, the old stronghold of the O'Donoghues. Of one of the islands, Innisfallen, Thomas Moore sang a pretty song. There, too, is Muckross Abbey, founded by the Franciscan Fathers five hundred years ago.

They are not joyous lakes, the Lakes of Killarney, but the isles they hold are the lovelier for their tears and, as the poet wrote, "'Tis heaven's own glance when the sun appears."

In 1906 Elijah the Second took a vacation and left Voliva in charge of Zion—and with the usual result. Dowie's vacation became permanent, Voliva succeeded to the post and the profits of First Apostle Dowie's vacation became permanent. Voliva succeeded to the post and the profits of First Apostle Not long ago he took a trip around the world to prove his contention that the world is not round but is really as flat as a pancake. To his own satisfaction he proved it, calmly brushing aside all the science of the last five centuries.

The Zionites are extreme in Fundamentalism and Puritanism, though report has it that cigarettes, one-piece bathing suits and lipsticks are not unknown in the holy city. If not, it must be on the sly, for there is no record of Wilbur Glenn Voliva recanting his belief that all sinners are doomed to swim eternally in a pool of mixed drinks, like a fly caught in the blue flames of good French brandy rising from a coffee cup.

With one of those magnificent gestures of which we sentimental Americans alone seem capable, Mr. William Bowers Bourn of San Mateo, California, hitherto unknown to fame, has purchased from the Earl of Kenmare 100,000 Irish acres and presented them, as a free gift, to the Irish Free State. Those acres contain a jewel of the world, the Lakes of Killarney, immortalized in song and story, dear to every Irish heart and one of the beauty spots of the earth.

The property, with the three Lakes of Killarney, near Killarney Town, has belonged to Lord Kenmare's family ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth. Hard times and crushing taxes forced Kenmare, as it has driven other great land holders, to go to the auction block. Mr. Bourn of California, of Irish descent, seized the opportunity to present to the Irish people one of their dearest bits of land and water. There was a famous castle on the land until about twenty years ago, when a fire destroyed it with its priceless collection of art treasures and historical relics.

Ancient legends hover like ghosts about the lovely sapphire lakes in their emerald hills. St. Patrick, the story goes, climbed to the top of the tallest mountain overlooking Killarney water, stretched his hand forth and blessed it. Of the three lakes, Lough Torc, the middle, is famous for the rock of Colleen Bawn. From that grim rock, the Irish believe, the wicked Danny Man flung the fair Lily of Killarney to her doom in the waters below.

Grounds for Marriage

In Any State

Well, there is something new under the sun.

An Oakland, California, man complains in divorce court that his wife was "inexpensive cruel" to him. He alleges that she refused to wear silk or satin and that in order to escape nagging he had to pretend that clothes he bought for her cost from $15 to $20 less than their actual price.

He also says he urged her to open as many charge accounts as she could and she refused.

We can't say whether these are grounds for divorce in California. But if the divorce is granted we can see a long line of ladies waiting outside the courthouse ready to marry the gentleman in the case. And a longer line of men waiting to marry the lady.

Just Folks

Obedient

Time was when I was young and bold,
Mad as the well-known hatter,
To my opinion I could hold
In many a doubtful matter;
But I gave up long years ago,
When choices lie before me,
My personal preferences to show.
My mind is made up for me.
Whatever our little problems are,
To speak the truth compels me
To say I've found it easier far
To do as Nellie tells me.

For seven and twenty years we've shared
Both fair and stormy weather,
Contentedly together.
Whene'er my whim with hers has crossed
My wisdom I've not vaunted,
But let the argument be lost
To do as Nellie wanted.
I've found it much the simpler way.
From grisvous care it rids me,
And so, "All right, my dear!" I say,
And do as Nellie bids me.

Oh, should the rug be green or red,
My whim is quickly shaken.
Though I my choice for green have said,
The red's the one we've taken.
Now some there are who say to me,
To be so weak and wavery
In times of doubt is cowardly
And nothing short of slavery.
But I will put my preference by
Until the last blow falls me,
And gladly, to the day I die,
Do just as Nellie tells me.
